HOST AT M'KINLEY SERVICES

100,000 Barred from Exercises at Monument During Roosevelt's Speech.

CANTON, O., Sept. 30.—An address by President Roosevelt and a poem written for the occasion and recited by James Whitcomb Riley, were the features of the dedication here to-day of the $540,000 McKinley memorial monument built by a country-wide popular subscription of 1,500,000 small contributions.

Many distinguished men were in attendance. The ceremonies were witnessed by 3,000 people in the spectators' stand, and 100,000 who crowded the streets, but most of which in vain sought admission to the grounds. Hundreds of prominent men, representing Congress, the army, navy and State governments took part in the ceremonies.

Soldiers Bar Visitors.

The preferred 3,000 had secured their tickets of the McKinley Memorial Association. A stand to seat another 1,000 was built yesterday at one side of the main stand. The general public was admitted to this stand, as they came. It was filled hours before the exercises began, and the line of United States regular soldiers that completely encircled the grounds had orders to admit no more.

No announcement that the audience was to be limited was made before Saturday, and thousands of strangers sought in vain for admission.

Associate Supreme Justice Day, president of the memorial association, said there were two reasons for limiting the audience. One was to guard the safety of the President. The other was to protect the grounds from trampling feet.

4,000 Men Guard President.

Two thousand soldiers of the regular army and 2000 of the Ohio militia protected President Roosevelt and other notables here and kept the crowd from breaking through the ropes that lined all the down-town streets. The regulars were under command of Brigadier General J. M. K. Davis.

President Roosevelt arrived at 10:11 a. m. over the Pennsylvania and was driven to the square to the high school building. United States cavalry formed his escort.

At the school 1500 boys and girls were grouped on a large stand and dressed to form a flag. Nearly 5000 other school children were grouped on either side. All sang "America" and "The Star Spangled Banner."

Reviews Big Parade.

From the school the President was driven to a large stand in the square from which he reviewed the parade. Platoons of police, dismounted, and United States cavalry, headed the parade. There were six brigades with nearly 1,000 men in line. President McKinley's regiment, the Twenty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, was in the first brigade, with G. A. R. veterans, Spanish American war veterans, American veterans of foreign service, loyal legion of the United States and Sons of Veterans. Colonel W. S. Rogers, Ohio commander G. A. R., and the Twelfth United States Cavalry Band, mounted, headed the first brigade.

The Gate City Guard of Atlanta, Ga., the Washington Infantry of Pittsburg, were in the second brigade with the Tippecanoe Club of Cleveland; the McKinley Commemoration Club of Pittsburg and officials and citizens of Niles, Akron and Alliance.

The four brigades of the second division were composed of uniformed men of a score of fraternal orders.

The streets crossing the public square had been made a court of honor. Ropes of evergreens were strung on either side of the streets from the tops of staffs mounted in bases that bore McKinley's monogram.

While the parade marched out through the monument grounds, President Roosevelt and three hundred others, who included the guests of honor, were served a luncheon in the Auditorium downtown.

The President was driven from the Auditorium to the monument.

The parade was kept marching while the dedication ceremonies were in progress to keep the crowds away from the monument while the President was speaking.

The dedication opened with invocation by Rev. Frank M. Bristol of Washington. Governor Harris of Ohio was president of the day. He made the opening address and Justice Day followed in an address that told of the building of the memorial.

CHAPTER I.

Miss Elizabeth Van Alston awakened with a feeling of impending danger. Being tall, angular, given to worry, nightmares and forboding—all of which her placid, plump sister classed as "nerves"—she refrained from action until further evidence developed.

"There's something the matter, somewhere," she muttered, tossing restlessly on her pillow. "Something must have awakened me. I was sound asleep."

Although she listened with every nerve bent on justifying her premonition, not a sound reached her ears beyond the steady beat of the rain on the window pane. In the silence of the room the steady beat magnified a hundred fold and seemed to shut out all other sound.

She raised herself on her elbow and listened.

Still she could obtain no justification for her sub-conscious desire to awaken her sister.

She sank back on her pillow with a sigh of disappointment.

"Bessie, I do wish you would take something for your nerves," remarked Miss Mary Van Alston from the darkness on the other side of the bed. "You just give me the creeps, sitting up looking around at nothing."

Startled

"I thought I heard something," returned Miss Elizabeth Van Alston apologetically. "I awakened suddenly."

"If you would only see something," said Miss Mary with withering scorn that cut through the darkness like a knife. "I should be gratified. I am sure if I watched as much as you did nights I should see my great grandmother's gray ghost warming her hands at the hearth."

Miss Elizabeth Van Alston made no retort, but quietly cuddled her lean length into a heap upon her side of the bed and endeavored, submissively, to woo slumber, in the guilty knowledge that her nerves were quiescent, since her sister was awake.

Gradually she drifted off to sleep, leaving Miss Mary Van Alston, fair, fleshy and just forty, wideawake, staring up at the darkness, hopelessly awakened.

"Bessie," she began finally; but there was no reply.

"Elizabeth."

Miss Elizabeth Van Alston was wrapped in the sound sleep of an infant.

"I want to talk to you about the new French teacher," explained Miss Mary Van Alston, hopefully bidding for attention; "don't you think——"

It is unkind to state the nature of the response Miss Elizabeth Van Alston made, but veracity would characterize it as a snore.

Indignant

"Elizabeth Van Alston!" declared Miss Mary Van Alston, greatly provoked; "you are a wretch!"

Receiving no contradiction, Miss Mary Van Alston tossed indignantly on her side of the bed, and fell to counting the rain beats on the window pane.

But she realized that to all intents and purposes, she was awake for the rest of the night. Therefore she arose, went to the window and peered out over the five-acre lawn that stretched from the Misses Van Alston Select Finishing School for Young Ladies to the road.

The Misses Van Alston occupied the rooms on the second floor front, so the window through which she gazed gave her a clear view for the length of the drive which ran from the road to the wide veranda.

Beyond, at the road the bluish white electric lights cheered her with their twinkling in the storm and she realized a sense of comfort as she gazed.

CONTEST CONDITIONS

This story will run through the week. The final chapter, in which the mystery will be solved, will be printed in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

The only day on which no instalment of the story will appear will be Saturday. The next to the last chapter will be printed Friday, and then everybody will have until 6 p. m. Saturday in which to solve the mystery.

The person who solves the mystery most accurately will receive the first prize of $50.

If no one solves the mystery accurately, the one who comes nearest to a correct solution will receive the first prize.

REMEMBER

That this is a test of SKILL IN THINKING, not skill in writing. All you have to do to win first prize is to THINK OUT the solution of the mystery QUICKER than somebody else. The literary merit of the answers will not be considered.

That in case two or more answers are equally correct, the prizes will be awarded ACCORDING TO THE POSTMARKS ON THE ENVELOPES, the one mailed first receiving the first prize, etc.

That persons living at a distance from Boston have just as good a chance to win prizes as those who live right in Boston.

NO ANSWER POSTMARKED LATER THAN 6 P. M. SATURDAY WILL BE CONSIDERED.

How long she spent at the window she could not tell. Neither could she say that she had not fallen asleep, when she heard a slight crushing of the gravel in the driveway.

At any rate she rubbed her eyes vigorously and stared. There was no vehicle in sight and the sound had ceased.

She could hear her heart, fluttering under her ample bosom, could hear, almost her pulse beat and the rain beat seemed clamorous. But the sound of gravel crushing on the driveway had absolutely ceased.

As minutes passed, she became more and more wide awake and inclined to the belief that she had been dreaming.

"Now, if I call Elizabeth," she cogitated, "I shall never hear the last of it."

Falls Alseep

Accordingly, being of a phlegmatic turn of mind, she decided it would be wiser to get some sleep before the morning brought its duties. She therefore crept back to her side of the big bed and soon was fast asleep.

This is the story of the Misses Van Alston, pieced together as they told it to me early the following morning, when it was discovered that Miss Mildred Cobbett, the only daughter of James K. Cobbett, millionaire mine owner and railroad operator of Montana, had disappeared during the night.

A ladder was found under her window, her room was on the third floor front, directly over that occupied by the Misses Van Alston. The window appeared to have been forced open from the outside. The young heiress, who was just eighteen, had evidently been kidnapped in her nightclothes.

After hearing the agitated spinsters to the end, I requested them to show me the room Miss Cobbett had occupied.

WALTHOUR IS BADLY HURT IN RACE

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—Bobby Walthour, the American bicyclist, lies dangerously injured in the hospital here, being hurt in a big accident on the Spandau track yesterday in which one attendant was killed and three others were severely injured.

The accident came in the 100-kilometer race, when a pacemaker's tire burst. A hospital attendant who crossed the track was instantly killed, as he ran into Walthour's pacing machine with Hoffman up. The latter took a header and Walthour went down with him.

Walthour landed on his head and received a fractured skull, and was hurried to the hospital, where he has been unconscious ever since and is in a precarious condition. Hoffman, too, is in bad shape, but the heavy clothing which he wore may be the means of saving his life.

CITY AUDITOR ON STAND IN COAL INQUIRY, TELLS HOW BILLS WERE PAID

Secretary Farley of Finance Commission Testifies That City Paid for Hundreds of Tons of Coal Never Delivered—Public Hearings on To-day.

Secretary J. Wells Farley of the Finance Commission testified to-day at its hearing in the State House that the city of Boston had paid for hundreds of tons of c oal which had never been delivered to it.

The coal was sold to the city, he said, by the W. K. Niver company, whose agent, Maurice H. Klous, has been arraigned already in a criminal court on the charge of the larceny of $8,003.13 from the city of Boston.

City Auditor Mitchell was on the stand also this morning. He told of how the city bills had been paid.

Secretary Wells stated that his investigations had shown that the city had paid for 1,540 tons sent here on the barges Langhorn and Buckride, whereas the railroad bill of lading at the mines showed that there were only 1,451 tons aboard.

"City Paid for Coal It Didn't Get."

"The city had paid for 89 tons and 1940 pounds than were actually on the barges in this instance.

"Another instance where the city paid for coal it never got was a consignment on the barge Buckridge. The bill of lading showed that on October 2, 1905, there were shipped to W. K. Niver Co. 1435 tons, but other documents prove that the city had paid for 1544 tons and 375 pounds. This was payment by the city for 109 tons and 379 pounds that it never received.

Finance Hearing Opens.

It was 10:30 o'clock when the Commission resumed its probe hear ings. All members were present at the opening except John F. Kennedy. The hearing was announced to take place in Room 249, but that proved too small, and the Commission removed with witnesses to Room 426. The twenty-six witnesses had been summoned by th Commission, but at the opening only about half a dozen of them had put in an appearance. It was understood that the others had been told that they would be notified when awtned on the stand. Ten of them hold high city offices, a number of them are connected with big coal concerns, and several are city employes, past or present.

City Auditor J. Alfred Mitchell was the first witness to take the stand. He was questioned by former District Attorney Sughrue.

Mr. Mitchell is the city official whose business it is to pass upon all bills against Boston.

Asked to Produce Contracts.

Mr. Sughrue called upon him to produce certain contracts between the city and the W. K. Niver Coal Company. One contract was dated July 5, 1905, and called for 10,000 tons of George's Creek coal for the ferry division. Another of the same date called for 10,000 tons for the sewer division. The contracts were signed by James Donovan, then superintendent of streets, for the city, and by Maurice H. Klous, manager, for the coal company.

Klous is accused of the larceny of $8,008.13 from the city of Boston because of coal contracts and will have a hearing on October 4.

Mr. Mitchell read the contracts and then was asked to produce weighers' certificates, bills and estimates under which the first payment by the city was made. The first weighers' certificate read "1,540 tons, 1,940 pounds," and, according to the papers, the coal was delivered at the Cow Pasture. Both the bill and the estimate for payment called for $5,254.35.

After this had been gone through the examination began.

"Have you ever seen a bill of lading for that shipment?" asked Mr. Sughrue.

"No," replied Mr. Mitchell.

Not Called for in Contract.

"Do you know why?" asked the former District Attorney.

"It was not called for in the contract," answered Mr. Mitchell.

"Then you were obliged to depend entirely for your knowledge upon the weighers' certificate?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Mitchell.

Then the former public prosecutor caused a stir among spectators. Turning to members of the finance commission, he exclaimed, in earnest tones:

"I wish the commission to take particular notice of the amount on the weighers' certificate on the bill."

LOCKED IN CELLS, SIX NEAR DEATH FROM FIRE

PEABODY, Sept. 30.—Locked in cells in the Peabody Town hall, with the keys in an inaccessible place, six prisoners, one a woman, narrowly escaped death by fire early to-day. They were rescued by the firemen who broke open the bars to the windows and dragged them out, all of them unconscious and nearly suffocated. Two of them, Henry Kenney, aged 51, of Melvin street, Wakefield, and Horace Stanley, 23, from Lowell, are still unconscious in the Salem hospital, but is is believed they will recover.

The screams of the caged prisoners were heard for quite awhile before the alarm was given. Neighbors paid little attention, however, not dreaming of their predicament. Captain Edward McCarthy, who has charge of the department at night, patrols Peabody square, some distance away and there is no caretaker on duty at the Town hall. He and a patrolman finally discovered the fire.

They tried in vain to get at the cell keys, which were in the police room, but this room was ablaze and it seemed as if the prisoners would surely perish. Finally the bars were broken and the prisoners dragged out. All were overcome by smoke. Six physicians worked over them for some time before four, including the woman, were finally revived. The other two were taken to Salem hospital.

The police room was destroyed and the fire burned to the second floor. The damage was about $8,000.

SAVE 3 PRISONERS AS FLAMES REACH CAMBRIDGE CELLS

Three prisoners were rescued from flaming cells in Cambridge police headquarters early to-day, when fire damaged the upper floors of the four-story brick structure in Cambridge, occupied on the two lower floors by Chemical Engine 1 and police headquarters.

The fire broke out on the third floor, occupied by Leslie F. Hunting Camp, Legion of Spanish War Veterans. It swept through the third floor and up through attic rooms in the fourth to the roof.

Two alarms were sounded, the first at 6:35 o'clock and the second ten minutes later.

The frightened prisoners were removed to safety from their cells on the fourth floor and police books and records were quickly removed also. Important among these were the papers in the manslaughter case of George M. Wetherbee of Waltham, who goes on trial to-day as the result of an automobile accident in Cambridge on May 1, when Warren F. Batchelder of Cambridge was killed.

The lists and records of the registrars of voters on the second floor were also saved. Damage to the municipal quarters is wholly from water. The loss on building will reach $2,500.

REPORT MANY DEAD IN WRECK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—The Frisco "Meteor" train was wrecked to-day and is now burning near Dlacon, Mo. Several persons are reported killed.

DEATH AND RUIN FOLLOW RECORD-BREAKING GALE

TWO BIG LINERS, BADLY BATTERED, LIMP INTO PORT TO-DAY.

Battered and buffeted by the two days' gale that swept the coast and sea, two big transatlantic liners, the Devonian and the Canopic came into port early to-day.

Alice Neilson, the opera singer, who was a passenger on the Canopic, said that she sat up all night rather than keep in her stateroom in such a storm.

Miss Neilson brought with her a new tenor, Florencio Constantino and Signor Bresaccia, pianist and a new opera by the Italian composer, Ponchiele. Her season opens in New Orleans, but she will be in Boston in December.

Ex-Mayor Thomas N. Hart, his daughter, Mrs. Ernst, and her husband were also passengers. Mary Johnston, the authoress, accompanied by her two sisters and her brothers; D. N. Botassi, Consul-General of Greece in New York, and William M. Stockbridge, a Boston lawyer, were in the saloon.

On board the Leyland line Devonian when she arrived to-day after having had a hard battle with last night's storm were Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D. D., of Cambridge, Mrs. McKenzie and Miss Margaret McKenzie. Other passengers were Samuel A. King of Bryan Mawr, Mrs. Rebecah B. Sherman and Mrs. S. S. Sherman of Newton and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sumner of Marlboro street and their two sons.

U. S. Cruiser in Collision.

Death and ruin to shipping followed in the wake of the terrific storm, the worst September gale in the history of the Weather Bureau. Off Provincetown, the storm was so furious that it created havoc among the warships and other craft. The refrigerator ship Glacier fouled the Cruiser Des Moines in the height of the storm, carrying away the boats on the port side of the Des Moines.

Two lives were lost from the Provincetown schooner, Annie M. Perry, about fifty miles off Highland life. They were Portuguese sailors, whose names are unknown.

At Newport the magnificent steam yachts narrowly escaped going ashore. Two big schooners, the Dorothy Palmer and Magnus Mason, were driven from their positions on East Boston flats, but damage was prevented by several tugs. Small pleasure craft went ashore at South Boston. The sloop Utilius ran against the rocks at Raccon Island and sank.

At Vineyard Haven the British schooner Venturer was driven from her moorings and went ashore on West Chop shoal. At Marblehead, the sloop Gorilla went ashore at Rockmere Point.

Gale 65 Miles an Hour.

The steamer Harvard was the only large vessel to attempt to put to sea, but at quarantine she found it too rough and was brought to anchor. Skippers of craft in the lower harbor reported the conditions as the worst they had ever experienced at this time of the year.

The damage to the Des Moines is estimated at $15,000. The cruiser lay to all night with steam up to prevent further collisions. The naval tug Uncas dragged her anchor and to avoid disaster put into the harbor.

The gale at Newport was from 60 to 65 miles an hour. Cornelius Vanderbilt's magnificent steam yacht North Star and Lloyd Phoenix's Intrepid were saved from going ashore by letting go a second anchor, when they were dragging the first and were in imminent danger. Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt's 20-footer was nearly swamped.

Stormbound in the harbor were the tugs Dudley Pray and Battler of the "B" Line Transportation Company, together with scores of fishing craft.

Many Mishaps Reported.

The only arrival from abroad yesterday was the Sachem of the Warren line from Liverpool, Captain Murdock, who reported the weather as very foggy as well as heavy outside.

An exceptionally heavy surf swept up on the beach at Winthrop and the State boulevard was covered. The damage, however, was light. At Beachmont the tide made a record mark, but outside of a few small boats breaking away, all escaped.

Chelsea was hard hit and wires, trees and fences were blown down. On Tudor, Addison and Marginal streets big holes in the sidewalk are all that is left to show where big trees were once growing.

Many minor mishaps were reported inland. At East Watertown a small building on Cypress street was blown down and a large amount of fruit was blown from the trees.

At Newton a chimney was blown from a large tenement block at the corner of Washington and Thornton streets and one person, Mrs. Mary Moore, was struck on the shoulder by one of the bricks and injured.

Warnings Prevent Loss.

In Cambridge the lighting system suffered badly, over seventy large and small lights being out of commission.

That more damage did not result was due to the fact that storm warnings had been sent out many hours in advance.

In Boston proper the storm was mostly confined to flooded cellars, but traffic was badly crippled, the streets being practically deserted.

New England was not alone the storm centre, for it raged all over the territory east of the Mississippi River. It has passed out to sea, leaving the Hub shivering in the grasp of a cold wave, although warmer weather is promised for to-day.

LASTERS FIRM; FEW RETURN TO THEIR OLD JOBS

BROCKTON, Sept. 30.—Only forty-nine of the 260 shoe lasters who quit work at the Douglass shoe factory last week went back to work to-day, although 100 have asked that their positions be held open by the company for another week.

Superintendent Herbert T. Drake, to-day notified President Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union that the strike was on in full force, and that he expected the union to fulfill its contract with the company.

The trouble is the outcome of the secession of a number of lasters from the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. They have organized the "Independent Lasters' Union," and the Douglas management refused to recognize it.

MRS. KNOWLES SUIT ROUSES MUSIC WORLD

Friends Declare Worcester Festival Management Acted Too Hastily.

SOCIETY FOLK ARE STIRRED

WORCESTER, Sept. 30.—Sentiment of society is veering in favor of Mrs. Gertrude Inez Buss Knowles, against whom divorce proceedings were begun last week and whose husband named Leroy S. Kenfield, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Knowles's friends charge the management of the Worcester Music Festival with too hasty action in immediately severing her contract to sing this week. They say the music festival people have been too ready to jump at conclusions and to prejudge her guilty on the strength of the divorce story. They promise a sharp fight to have the beautiful singer reinstated in her role in this week's program of the festival.

No recent event has so stirred Worcester society and Worcester's music world.

The present reaction is caused by reconsideration of her case by her best friends, who demand a like reconsideration by the people who have, they say, too hastily judged the former society queen. Worcester's fashionable West Side declares "it is a shame. She hasn't had a fair chance."

Friends to Fight.

Charles I. Rice, who helped to train Mrs. Knowles for her part in the music festival programme, says: "I have heard many rumors that the friends of Mrs. Knowles intend to fight for her reinstatement as a leading soloist of the coming festival, but I hardly think anything will come of it. Anyway, I don't think she would have the nerve to appear in the face of the charges made against her. We sent no notice to Mrs. Knowles that she was dismissed. We merely went ahead and engaged another to take her place. We have heard nothing from Mrs. Knowles regarding such action. There is no agreement by which she can sue for breach of contract, as her understanding was only verbal. If Mrs. Knowles is exonerated from the charges made against her there is no reason why she should not return to Worcester to become the favorite that she was before the public announcement of her husband's action against her."

Leaves Boston Church.

In addition to losing her place on the programme of the Worcester music festival, Mrs. Knowles has lost her position in the choir of the Park Street Church in this city. Questioned in regard to the action of the church in summarily dismissing Mrs. Knowles, Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, the pastor, replied, "We acted as we thought best. Why we have done so is nobody's business. The Park Street Church can take care of itself."

CONTESTS FOR GEN. FURLONG'S HALF MILLION

A claimant for the half-million dollars in government and city bonds left by General Charles E. Furlong, who died at the Falmouth Hotel, Portland, Me., last Wednesday, has appeared in the person of the Hon. Alexander D. M. Hill, a cousin.

Captain Hill conducts a photograph establishment on West Twenty-second street in New York. He resigned from his regiment after some years of service because he couldn't stand the expense. He has retained Governor Hughes' old firm to press his claims.

But Captain Hill doesn't want to fight for the money if it has been left to the family of General U. S. Grant, on whose staff General Furlong served during the war or to any individuals.

"If the will is properly drawn," said the captain, "and it is shown that General Furlong—my first cousin, once removed, as we say on the other side—was sane and capable, neither myself nor my four brothers will go to court. Or if the money has been left by General Furlong to individuals we shall make no contest in all likelihood. The point is that if there is no will or if the will gives the money to charity we think as next of kin that we ought to have the property. I might add that the money would come in pretty handy right now."

According to the Captain, his family, the Montgomerys, once Montgomeries, should be enjoying to-day the estates and titles of the Scottish Earl of Eglinton.

BELGRADE OFFICERS PRISON SUICIDES

BELGRADE, Servia, Sept. 30.—An extraordinary occurrence in the Government prison here resulted in the death of two former army officers and serious street rioting.

The two former officers, who were opponents of the so-called regicide regime, were detained in prison on a trivial charge, seized the guns from the prison guards and after a fierce struggle killed themselves.

JURY FREES WHALEN ON ROBBERY CHARGE

RETURN SEALED VERDICT AFTER FIVE HOURS OF DELIBERATION.

Charles J. Whalen, New Haven freight clerk, was to-day found not guilty of having robbed Miss Dora Goldberg of $800 on Harrison avenue, last June.

The verdict, which was reached last Friday night after the jury had been out five hours, was sealed and was opened in court to-day and read to Whalen by Assistant Clerk Julian Seriac.

When Whalen was told to stand up he stepped to the bar and gripped it with both hands. Occupying seats near the bar were his mother and his eighteen-year-old sister, Gertrude. They leaned forward in eager expectation.

Whalen Nearly Collapses.

Clerk Seriac went through the usual formal words, and when he came to "and finds the defendant not guilty" Whalen for a moment seemed ready to collapse. He swayed forward, then took a firmer grip on the railing to steady himself. Mrs. Whalen burst into tears, as did Gertrude.

That seemed to arouse Whalen. He waited until Judge Crosby formally discharged him from custody, and then turned quickly to his devoted relatives. He put his arms round his mother first, kissed her, and then did the same thing to his sister. They passed out of the courtroom together, the women weeping happily, and Whalen with both arms round them.

Once in the corridor he kissed the two again. Turning to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, he said: "I'm going right back to work. I'm the happiest man in Boston."

He escorted his mother and his sister to the car and then turned in the direction of the South Boston freight sheds, where word of his freedom had already been sent, and where the other employes were waiting to welcome him.

Case of Mistaken Identity.

It was the contention of Counsel Proctor that Whalen was the victim of mistaken identity. Miss Goldberg, who had been roughly used when the package of bills and checks was seized by the bold highwayman as she was on her way to the bank to deposit the money for her father, was positive in her identification of Whalen as the man who had robbed her. Others who saw the robbery also believed Whalen to be the man.

To combat these statements Whalen brought to court his chief in the freight sheds and several of his fellow clerks as well as his mother and his sister.

The clerks said that at the time of the robbery Whalen was at work in South Boston.

A derby hat dropped by the highwayman was produced. It fitted Whalen. He proved that he wore a straw hat on that day, and his mother and his sister both testified that his old derby was hanging on a nail in the kitchen of his home, and produced the hat.

The jury retired at 3:15 Friday afternoon. At 8 o'clock they reached the verdict, freeing the young man of the charge.

MEETS HIS WIFE IN MID-OCEAN

Speaking the Campania of the Cunard l'm on her way to New York in midocean last week, Captain J. Fortay of the British steamship St. Patrick learned that his wife and his daughter, whom he had not seen for two years, were on board. With glasses Captain Fortay could make out the two women waving their handkerchiefs at him. He put on all steam and kept as close to the Campania as possible, but the fast Cunarder beat out his freighter easily.

The Campania got into New York, while Captain Fortay, trying to make Boston, ran into a fog and storm Sunday night and was unable to pick up a pilot until early to-day. When he made his dock he found Mrs. Fortay and his daughter waiting for him.

The greeting between the three made everybody happy who saw it. On this voyage Captain Fortay expected to receive orders to return to England, but instead found cargo waiting for Chinese ports. Mrs. Fortay had learned this fact at home and determined to meet her husband here in Boston rather than wait another year for him to come home.

POET ROBITSCHEK FOUND ILL IN BED

LOWELL, Sept. 30.—Solomon Robitschek, who was declared guilty of using the mails to extort $30,000 from the Salvation Army, but who was not to be found in the court room when the verdict was declared Friday, has been located today by a Federal officer in his room on Linden street, in this city. He is too ill to be removed.

FIND DROWNED MAN; MURDER SUSPECTED

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—With hands tied behind him and clothes weighted with stones, the body of an unidentified man was found floating in the Chicago River near its mouth yesterday. The police believe the man was the victim of a mysterious murder, but they also say he may have adopted an unusual method of suicide.

LIGHT TRUST FIGHTS LOWER RATES IN HUB

Asks Commission to Stay Its Decision Till New Lamp Is Introduced.

SAYS RATES ARE JUSTIFIED

In the hope that the demand for cheaper electricity and the abandonment of discriminating treatment of customers will be stayed, the Edison Company has appealed to the Commission of Gas and Electricity to postpone any change in the kilowatt price of electricity until the company can completely install a new lamp. This is part of the answer of Everett W. Burdett, counsel for the company, read to the commission to-day in reply to the complaint of the Public Franchise League.

Mr. Burdett declared that the conditions now are abnormal, owing to the effect which will be produced by the introduction of this lamp. The lamps, which are being obtained as rapidly as they can be turned out by the manufacturers, will secure to the consumers paying the 15-cent rate a saving twice as great as if an alternative rate of 10 cents a kilowatt was alone adopted.

This lower rate is a tentative suggestion of the league.

Mr. Burdett said that the preferential treatment of certain classes of customers was justified and that it was a universal custom, and that it was not the consumers paying a maximum of 15 cents a kilowatt who made the company's profits, but that the profits come from those who pay 10 cents a kilowatt and less. He maintained that the income of the company, all things considered, was not excessive.

He denied that the relative cost of the company's plant was much higher than in certain other cities. Excess of taxes, he said, was largely responsible for higher cost of management. Purchases of other plants, he said, have given customers lower prices in the entire territory served.

He thought such difficulties as prevail in adapting the sliding scale could be remedied, but did not suggest any plan.

MRS. BATONYI TO RESUME HER FORMER NAME

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The interesting announcement is made to-day that Mrs. Aurel Batonyi is to resume the name of Burke-Roche, under which she held sway in the most exclusive New York society for years prior to her surprising marriage with Batonyi against the wishes of her father, millionaire Frank Work.

Her reward for this will be reconciliation with her beautiful daughter Cynthia, her twin sons, Francis and Maurice Roche, and the millions which seemed lost to her forever when her aged father cast her off.

Breaks With Batonyi.

On the understanding that she has completely and absolutely broken with Batonyi and is to resume the name of Burke-Roche, her father will reopen Elm Court, his magnificent Newport villa, and give her the opportunity to resume her old social sway, with the same lavish hospitality and expenditure of money that characterized her social reign of yore.

"Two Mile Farm," the splendid Batonyi place in Middletown, which Mrs. Batonyi gave to her husband, is closed. The valuable horses and dogs are to be sold, while the stables and kennels at Elm Court are to be stocked with the finest blooded animals that can be bought in this country and Europe. The whole place is to be entirely renovated and a great deal of money spent on the improvements.

Will Apply for Divorce.

Mrs. Batonyi is to apply to the courts for legal right to resume the name of her English husband, from whom she obtained a divorce, and who is now suing her for a decree.

The complications in the situation are many, and just what is to become of Batonyi is yet a mystery. But it is safe to say that he will pass entirely out of the life of the beautiful society woman, and his name will no longer be hurtful to the pride of her father and her children.

HAIL HISGEN AND BROWN TO HEAD LEAGUE TICKET

GREAT ENTHUSIASM EXPECTED AT THE APPROACHING CONVENTION OF NEW PARTY.

Three days before the Independence League State convention opens in Faneuil Hall at 11 o'clock Thursday, it appears that the ticket will be headed by Thomas Louis Hisgen of Springfield, for Governor, and Elbridge Gerry Brown of Brockton, for Lieutenant-Governor.

The enthusiasm with which Hisgen and Brown were received last week at the national conference of Leaguers in the Gilsey House, New York, and on Saturday at the convention in Carnegie Hall, showed, Massachusetts members of the League said to-day, that they have become not only State but national figures.

Up and down the State, on the stump, Mr. Hisgen, if he is nominated, will tell the voters of Massachusetts something about his own long fight with the Standard Oil monopoly and some of the things that a Republican legislature did to him when he asked for a law to prevent discrimination.

Nobody has forgotten Mr. Brown's phenomenal run of a year ago, when, a poor man, without funds for the ordinary expense of a campaign, he came well within 10,000 votes of the total polled by the millionaire candidate of the Republicans.

Every City Represented.

Every city in Massachusetts will be represented at Thursday's convention in Faneuil Hall. Admission to the galleries will be by ticket only. Some 300 seats are being held for ladies and their escorts. These seats will be reserved until 11 o'clock. They cannot be held after that hour.

From 10 until 11 o'clock there will be a concert of popular airs by Benevente's Boston Band.

Perhaps no incident of the program has occasioned more comment than the fact that the "platform," or resolutions, will be read to the Independence League convention this week by the very man who one year ago had the same honor in the Democratic State convention. He is Hon. Walter L. Ramsdell of Lynn, former Mayor.

Meet on Night Before.

The State Committee of the League will meet on Wednesday night at headquarters on the second floor of the Quincy House. Open house is announced for all the convention delegates who may be in town. Thursday's convention will be called to order by George W. Curtis of Springfield, State secretary. The Hon. William N. Osgood of Lowell, State president, will be the permanent chairman.

Nobody, it was said to-day, will have to guess what the Independence League platform is driving at.

It will call for a more liberal injunction law; it will ask for an anti-discrimination law, to end the Standard Oil game of reducing the price on oil in those localities which enjoy competition; it will demand trial by jury in contempt-of-court cases, and it will be the most outspoken message of the year on the Mellen plan to merge all the transportation facilities of New England.

CREDENTIALS MAY CAUSE WAR AMONG DEMOCRATS

WHITNEY MANAGER DECLARES MANY DELEGATES LACK THEM YET.

Credentials to next Saturday's Democratic State Convention in the Court Square Theatre at Springfield are again to-day the bone of contention between the Henry M. Whitney forces, who claim two-thirds of the delegates-elect, and the Charles W. Bartlett people, who say that a majority of the 860 delegates are still unpledged to either man.

The credentials should be sent out by the Democratic State Committee. The machinery of the State Committee is undeniably in the hands of Bartlett boomers.

"We still claim," Campaign Manager Daniel F. Buckley said for Mr. Whitney, "that many delegates are as yet without their credentials. In a pinch, they could come on certificates made out by the chairmen of their caucuses.

"We also find fault with the form of the Democratic credential this year, which, for the first time within memory, is without a number and without a numbered coupon to be retained by the delegate when he gives up the body of the certificate at the door. The absence of this numbered coupon will inevitably lead to trouble."

Daniel J. Kiley, chairman of the State Committee's executive committee, could not be induced to say a word in reply to Mr. Buckley.

"I am too busy to be bothered with it," Kiley said.

Another member of the committee, however, said this:

"Buckley is still suffering from a swelled head. The committee will attend to its duties without his advice. Everybody entitled to a credential has the credential, unless it is still in the hands of his town or ward chairman. That is all there is to it. The present State Committee will insist upon its rights and privileges. If anybody attempts to dispute them there will be trouble at Springfield, and lots of it."

STOCK MARKET IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The stock market opened irregular. Missouri, Kansas & Texas and Northern Pacific started down ⅛. Louisville & Nashville opened ⅝ lower, and Great Northern ore certificates, Anaconda, St. Paul, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred declined ½.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit lost and regained ¼. Reading opened ½ higher, but declined ⅜. Union Pacific gained ¼, and Amalgamated gained as much. Colorado Fuel and Iron lost in all three points.

The cotton market opened easy, one to eight points lower: September, blank; October, 10.89@90; November, blank; December, 11.06@07; January, 11.18@19; February, 11.26 asked.

EVADED TRUST LAW.

RICHMOND, Ind., Sept. 30.—The local dairymen to-day raised the price of milk from five to seven cents a quart. In order to evade the new State law which prohibits agreements in restraint of trade or to raise the price, the dairymen did not sign an agreement. They say the raising of prices simultaneously is simply a coincidence.

BOOTH'S GOOD-BYE TONIGHT

Aged Salvation Army Leader Tells Great Sunday Meetings Successor Is Chosen.

MAKES FIFTY CONVERTS

To-night at the People's Palace at the corner of Washington and Brookline streets, General Booth will appear in public for the last time during his present visit in Boston, at a monster united meeting, at which Commissioner Nicol of the Salvation Army will preside. To-morrow morning General Booth will leave Boston for New York.

At the afternoon session yesterday the general set at rest all doubts as to continuation of the great work he has begun, after his death, by the announcement that his successor as commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army has already been chosen and is ready to step into his place and carry along the plans he has begun. The general, however, stated that he is not dead yet, and that he intends to live as long as possible to personally supervise the work.

Although converts have not come as rapidly as the general expected they might in Boston, the aged leader and founder of the Salvation Army is well satisfied with the success of his visit here. His exhortations at the monster meeting in the Boston Theatre last night brought good results, a half hundred having come forward in answer to his appeal for his hearers to dedicate themselves to the service of the Lord.

Finds Boston Conservative.

General Booth has found, he says, that Boston citizens are very cordial but slow to act, due probably to conservatism. He thinks its people are more thoughtful and take more time to consider a question. They do not make up their minds hurriedly as do the people of the other cities that he has visited.

Although the weather yesterday left everything to be desired, three great gatherings that filled the Boston Theatre greeted the Salvationist comander-in-chief as he addresed greetings morning, afternoon and night.

Of the three services that in the afternoon was perhaps the most interesting, because of the presence of a large company of distinguished citizens of Massachusetts as honorary vice-presidents and because at that time the general told "the secret of the success of the Salvation Army."

Introduced by Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., at 3 o'clock, the general spoke for almost two hours on the work of the Salvation Army, giving credit for its great success to public opinion and the self sacrifice of those who had given their life services to the betterment of their fellow men. Although he spoke vigorously at all times his voice at the close was as fresh as when he began and he showed no signs of physical strain.

Tells of Army Advance.

When the general advanced to the front of the stage to speak he was given such a vociferous welcome that he was forced to compel silence by the uplifting of his hands.

He told of the campaigns of the army in various quarters of the world, and stated that, where he had been uncertain of its work in Japan, recently inaugurated, he had found there the warmest of receptions on the part of the government and the people, and had enrolled thousands under its banner.

In Germany, where the work had been started without his sanction and almost against his will, it had made such strides that to-day it had extended to all parts of the country, and the army was permitted to march in the public streets in the busiest portions of the day in Berlin. He told of the great success of the movement in England, where it had its inception, and where it had received great sympathy from the King and Queen, and of the honors that had been conferred upon him by the University of Oxford.

He stated that the flag of the army now waved over fifty-three countries and colonies, having 7,500 societies, with 15,000 officers and 50,000 assistants, and many publications, printed in many different languages.

Three Secrets of Success.

In closing he gave these secrets for the success of the work:

"We have either taken temptation from the people or we have taken the people from the temptation. We have not taken the people from the churches, but have taken the lost, indifferent people from the wicked clasp of humanity. And finally, I attribute the secret in large part to the powerful and brave tribes of officers that we have in our great army. We have fought, we have wrestled, we have downed the wrong and upheld the right, and our result is that we have won the way and made way for others to follow."

The day's programme yesterday was started by the unique knee drill at the People's Palace, when hundreds of the soldiers of the Army prayed on bended knees from 7 to 8 o'clock, led by Colonel Chandler from the platform, interspersing hymns with their devotions.

At the morning service in the Boston Theatre, the General preached a sermon of great force, which was heard by an audience which filled the lower parts of the house.

Fifty Are Converted.

At the evening service hundreds were turned away because of lack of accommodation within the big structure. General Booth spoke for an hour, exhorting his hearers to give themselves to the service of the Lord, and before he had finished pleading a half-hundred had gone forward to the penitents' bench and asked for the prayers of the Army. General Booth spoke as vigorously as in the afternoon and morning and, with each new convert, the greatest of entausiasm was shown by the members of the Army in the great gathering.

During each of the services the Provincial Salvation Army rendered excellent music and hundreds of soldiers sang vigorously the Army hymns and joined in the choruses of Colonel Lawley, the general assistant and soloist.

COUNTY LOSES IN EDDY CASE?

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 30.—Judge Chamberlin is to-day hearing arguments of counsel on the petition filed in August by Senator William E. Chandler to dismiss the petition in equity brought by the "next friends" in the famous Eddy suit. People here are especially interested in learning whether or not the county will be obliged to stand the expense of the Eddy hearing. Early in the case Judge Chamberlin decided to waive the filing by plaintiffs of a bond covering the cost of trial. The "next friends" are liable, but have no funds. The cost is estimated at $10,000.

NEW ENGLAND'S GOVERNORS ALL TO VISIT FAIR

Distinguished Party to Go to Great Brockton Fair Next Wednesday.

BROCKTON, Sept. 30.—Every Governor of the six States of New England is expected at the great Brockton Fair this week, acceptances of invitations having been received from the executives of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut. These distinguished visitors with their staffs will, according to the present plans, call on Governor Guild at the State House Wednesday morning, and will come to Brockton on special cars attached to the 10:43 train.

The party will be banqueted at the Commercial Club at 12 o'clock, and then will follow the parade to the grounds, where cannon will boom salutes and 50,000 to 90,000 people, according to the weather, will cheer a welcome. The following day will be Boston day, according to the official program, but mayor's day unofficially.

Almost every city in Massachusetts and some outside the State have sent acceptances to the invitation to be represented. Mayor John S. Kent will personally do the honors.

The local militia has also invited all the leading militia officers of the State, and a group of army officers from all over the East to join them on that day, and aceptances have been legion.

Besides all this the leading horse owners of the country will be there, Reginald Vanderbilt with his blooded animals from Sandy Point Farm, Newport, R. I.; the Boston leaders, E. J. Bliss, Albert C. and Francis H. Burrage, Dr. C. J. Cronin and others, the Prides Crosing contingent, George Chipchase, Judge William H. Moore, P. T. Roche and others, with still more from all over the East.

DELEGATES ARE CHOSEN

FALL RIVER, Sept. 30.—An enthusiastic meeting of the Independence League was held here last evening and the following delegates to the State Convention were chosen:

Richard Hennessey, Hugh Cavanaugh, John J. Smith, Edward J. Cartwell, J. E. Rembsey, James W. Kelley, M. Maloney, Dr. Charles W. Copeland and James Malone.

A committee was also appointed to arrange for a rally, the date of which will be announced later. It was decided not to place any candidates in the field this year.

OLDEST MAN DIES IN MARBLEHEAD

MARBLEHEAD, Sept. 30.—William H. Randall, is dead, the oldest person in town, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Haynes, Rowland street, aged ninety-six years. At the age of eighty he did considerable blacksmithing work for the railroad between Annapolis and Digby.

OUST BRAYTON, SAYS JACKSON TO THE G. O. P.

Lieut.-Gov. Jackson of Rhode Island Will Be No Candidate Otherwise.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 30.—It is expected that Lieutenant-Governor Frederick H. Jackson will make an early reply to Colonel Frank W. Tillinghast, chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, as to the acceptance of the gubernatorial nomination offered him last week.

It is said that Mr. Jackson will refuse the nomination if General Charles R. Brayton does not withdraw from the campaign and the Republican party bind itself to take legal measures against the lobbyists at the next session at the capitol. Mr. Jackson is said to desire publicity and supervision of all work for and by the corporation lobbyists.

The same attitude against Braytonism is announced by Governor Higgins, who is to be the candidate of his party this year, one of his campaign planks being, it is said, anti-Braytonism.

It is reported that Lieutenant-Governor Jackson will force the Republican party into adopting Governor Higgins's policy, which is indorsed by the Democratic party. The momentous question is if the party will indorse the attitude of the Lieutenant-Governor or fight the issue at the polls.

Colonel Tillinghast, in discussing the anti-regulation reforms demanded by Mr. Jackson, remarked that he thought that if the Republican party felt such regulation best for the interests of the State it would take the required steps to bring about proper control by the Legislature of all charged with the advancement or promotion of legislative acts. Colonel Tillinghast declined to talk of the withdrawal from the campaign of General Brayton.

MILKMEN THREATEN TO TIE UP BOSTON SUPPLY

MEETING AT WORCESTER TO-DAY TO TAKE ACTION ON PRICE.

WORCESTER, Sept. 30.—Milk producers of Worcester county meet at Horticultural Hall to-day at 11 o'clock to consider whether or not they will accept the 35½ cent rate offered by Boston contractors for an eight and one-half quart can, for which the consumer is to pay 76½ cents.

A decision not to accept this offer means that, beginning to-morrow morning, producers in the county, representing 3,000 cans of milk daily, will hold back their usual shipments to Boston contractors. To-day's meeting folows a call by Jonas Bemis of Charlton, vice-president of the Boston Co-operative Milk Dealers' Association, who charges that the milk producers were sold out at a secret meeting by members of their own executive committee.

3,000 Cans Represented.

Three thousand cans of milk are represented by the producers who have promised to support Mr. Bemis to-day, and should the meeting vote to uphold his claim it will mean 40-cent prices from Boston contractors or the withholding of all shipments of milk.

Mr. Bemis claims that a majority of the producers are in favor of a 40-cent rate and that the first he heard of any compromise with the Boston contractors was when he received a letter stating that the price would be 35½ cents.

Secretary Not Worrying.

Secretary Hunter of the association says this price is a good one for the Worcester county producers, as it means an advance of nearly 7 cents over present prices. He claims he is not worrying about any investigation that District Attorney Moran may make, for he believes the association has asked nothing unreasonable, and says former Attorney General Herbert Parker has advised them that they are entirely within the law.

The settlement, he says, has been made to protect the public, but if it is found necessary the association willl have another meeting before November 1 and a higher rate be established.

Milk producers in Sutton who have been selling their product to Anderson Brothers of Worcester, have decided not to accept an offer of 38 cents a can. The members of the Sutton Milk Producers Union have voted to stand firm on their demand for 40 cents, and in case they are unable to get that price will retail their own milk.

"Out to Beat the Trust."

A committee has been appointed to seek a market for the milk in Worcester. Denis J. Carney of Clinton has announced that he is "out to beat the trust." After October 1 he will increase his price from five to six cents a quart, which is still one cent lower than the price charged by his rivals. He claims he was approached early in the Summer with a proposition to join in raising the price of milk to eight cents. He refused and now claims had he consented, milk would now be selling in Clinton for nine cents.

Nine Cents in Boston.

The price of milk to consumers in Boston until April 1 will be nine cents a quart. Stores will sell for eight cents, peddlers for nine, and producers will get from 35½ to 40 cents a can, according to the agreement of big contractors who control Boston's supply.

ENGINEERS MAY TIE UP LINES OF SHIPPING

Boston shipping is liable to be seriously crippled, if not entirely tied up, to-morrow by the marine engineers, who are fighting to have the authority over the engine room transferred from the captain to the chief engineer. They also want more help and a few other concessions.

A meeting will be held to-night in the Marine Engineers' Benevolent Association Hall in East Boston, when a vote will be taken to decide on what action to take.

The association, which numbers about 400, some time ago submitted schedules to the employers, and while a number were granted, in many cases the demands were turned down.

The marine engineers work under a United States government license, and while it is impossible for them to call an out-and-out strike, every engineer has the right to resign while in port, and they may walk out in a body.

Should the walkout affect the entire Atlantic seaboard, as it probably will, at least 3,500 men will be idle, and hundreds of coastwise vessels will be tied up.

Ferryboats, tugs and transatlantic steamers will not be affected, but all other shipping bids fair to be paralyzed.

END OF WORLD NEAR, PREDICTS BISHOP

He will assist the relief work now in progress in every way possible. The loss to wine growers in certain parts of the department of Herault will be enormous.

"SOCIETY EXPRESS" NEARLY DERAILED

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—That the "Society Express," on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, which carries society folk to Great Barrington, Stockbridge and Lenox on Saturdays, had a narrow escape from being wrecked became known to-day through the arrest of two men. Two journals were stolen from the parlor car after the train had been made up, and had an inspector not discovered this the coach would undoubtedly have been derailed after the train had gained a high speed.

The Greatest Book in the World, and New Facts About It

By Joseph E. O'Brien

HERE is the latest news about the greatest book in the world—the Bible. Here are facts in connection with it that are absolutely new to you.

You didn't know, did you, that the Bible is printed in 400 different languages and dialects? You didn't know that there are 200,000,000 copies of it scattered over the world, and that 6,000,000 copies are being printed each year?

Here are other new and interesting details of this greatest of books:

An organization of men spends $1,250,000 every year printing the book and distributing it in every spot where a human being can be taught to read. And it is not sold for profit.

One of the greatest romances in the world's work is the story of how this great book came to be printed in 400 tongues, and literally scattered broadcast over the world, as a sower spreads oats or a Samaritan his good deeds.

Romance of It

The story is told in the current number of Harper's Magazine by W. G. FitzGerald. He tells of a lonely Scotsman who is at work now on a low coral island, one of the New Hebrides group, 1,500 miles east of Australia.

Many years ago Dr. Paton and John Williams were killed and eaten by the cannibal inhabitants of these islands. But those same cannibals or their children are going to have a chance to read the greatest book in the world, just as soon as their language can be formulated into sounds that come within the range of written expression, and just as soon as enough words can be gathered by this painstaking Scotsman to convey its wonderful meaning to savage minds.

This man's experience gives an adequate idea of the difficulty the translators, of whom 2,000 are constantly employed by the American and British Bible societies, have in matching the words of the Bible with strange, new tongues.

On this coral island there are only three terms applicable to animals. They are pig, rat and dog. There is no word for "city," none for "barley," only four numerals. But this savage speech, little better than the grunting of animals, is going to be reduced to writing, and the Bible will be translated and printed and every savage there will be able to buy one for fifteen pounds of arrowroot, which he may gather in half a day.

One of 2,000

And the man at work on the coral island, listening for new words or sounds from the cannibals there, is only one of 2,000 who are scattered over the world, all of them listening for new words, experimenting with strange dialects, and reducing them to a written speech in which the greatest book in the world may be printed.

In the savage dialect of Central Australia a Bible translator had to make "kulingomu," meaning "nice smell," serve for frankincense. God was rendered as "marda maratje," meaning "red stone."

Up as near the North Pole almost as any of the explorers ever got, a translator named Purdy, writing his manuscript by the light of a whale oil lamp, in an Eskimo hut of frozen snow blocks, came upon the phrase, "The Lamb of God," which he knew of no way of conveying to the intelligence of the average Eskimo, because he wouldn't know what a lamb was.

He finally made it "The Little Seal of God," because the Eskimo has for that the same tenderness that the civilized American has for a lamb, and it is so written in the Bible of the Eskimos.

Over a Century Old

The work of printing, translating and distributing the greatest book in the world began more than a century ago. At that time Robert Morrison was working in Canton, China, on a translation of the Bible for the Forbidden Land. Some parts of the book, printed in colloquial languages, were being circulated along the Cochin China coast, the Gulf of Siam and on through the Malay Archipelago.

Every hour the men and women—for there have been notable women translators—risked their lives in the work. Many were victims of the ferocity of the strange people among whom they traveled.

Japan was closed then as well as China, yet Wells Williams went ahead with a Bible for the Japanese, and they have been reading it ever since. Many of the semi-savage tribes have learned their own language through the Bible.

The expense is enormous. The last revision of the Madagascar Bible cost $15,000. The society paid $150,000 to Dr. William Carey and his associates for the Serampore version of the Bible in Hindostani.

The only regions closed to the greatest book are Arabia, Persia, Nepal, the Soudan (for political reasons), Albani and Abyssinia. The American society, with an income of $750,000 a year, has circulated 77,000,000 copies in 150 tongues, and the English society has done the rest. Our own American Indians have the Bible in five dialects.

Timely Tips for Home Dressmakers

BLOUSES have long sleeves oftener than they have short ones. In the very fine lingerie ones and chiffon ones for cloth suits some of the new sleeves are those created by Bernhardt decades ago, and which she made her own. They wrinkle from elbow to knuckle, and are so tight they are buttoned after the arm has been slipped in. They are cut to a point at the knuckles and edged with lace.

Colors in Stockings

IT is as well not to blink facts; black stockings are banished to the farthest outposts of fashion's realm, and colored ones have arrived instead.

Latest in Belt Buckles

BELTS with handsome metal buckles are being worn with all suits that demand a lingerie blouse as an accompaniment. The most stunning are those of embossed Japanese leather, the rich deep colorings blending harmoniously with the majority of other hues; those of Oriental embroideries are also handsome.

Long Wrap Popular

TAKE it which way you will, or circumstances demand, the long enveloping wrap is an insignia of the hour.

Gathered About Gaiters

GAITER tops should preferably match the serge or broadcloth suit, but in cheviot they will be found a bit too cumbersome, and if the tailor-made be one of the brown cheviot or Scotch serge it will be easy to match either tone in brown kid boots.

Short-Waisted Effect

TO begin with, there is a wide falling away from the empire and the princess models which have been trying to so many and followed by thousands. There is still a slight short-waisted effect on some of the one-piece frocks, but not in the coat suits. There is no return to the deep point in front, but all the waistlines are more natural than they have been for some seasons.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

NOT A WISE MATCH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man 26 years of age, and have a cousin of 18 years. Now I love her dearly, and believe she loves me in return, but would like to know how I can find out whether she loves me "just as a cousin."

Also, do you think it right or wrong for cousins to marry.

A decisive answer to the last question will be appreciated.

Now Miss Fairfax, I know that you take quite an interest in such matters and I hope this will interest you, as it seems to me that the cousin relationship crops up pretty often and causes lots of trouble.

TED D.

THE only way to find out the true state of her sentiments toward you is to ask her. I do not think that a marriage between first cousins is a wise one, as the relationship is too close and the future should be considered. However, that is a question which you must decide for yourselves.

NO CHANCE OF HAPPINESS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for about six years, and in fact have been engaged to him on and off for about three years—that is to say, I have broken it time and time again and made it up each time because he became so heartbroken over it. Now this Summer I met another young man in the country in whom I became very much wrapped up, and when I returned to the city I once more broke off matters with the first named, because I felt that I loved this other man better and because I considered his temperament nearer my own. I dearly love this second man and would willingly give up the first if he would consent to it, which, by the way, he will not, but every one tells me that if I do this I will never have a day's luck for wrecking a man's life, etc. He is very good to me and would make a devoted husband, but it is hard for me to forget this new friend. Do you believe that fate would fall unkindly on me if I were to throw over this man? We have had many, many quarrels during the time of this courtship, and our tastes are not very similar, he preferring to be always alone with me, not wanting to make friends, while I always want to be out among friends.

CLARE.

AS you have broken and renewed the engagement so many times I think you stand a very small chance of happiness with the man, and had better break it for once and all. You would be very foolish to marry a man whom you did not love. Become engaged to the other man if you are sure you love him, but be careful that you do not get into a second entanglement like the first.

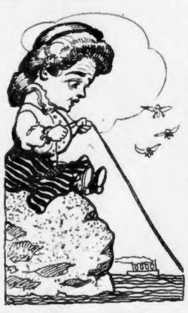
"Girls, Be Your Own Selves," Says Dorothy Dix in a Parable on The Five Foolish Virgins

She couldn't be natural, so this foolish virgin lost in the hunt for a husband.



Many eligible young men who wanted a wife happened along as she sat fishing, but:

BY DOROTHY DIX

THIS is the parable of the first foolish virgin.

There was a certain Maiden who was of fair and comely face and figure, and who possessed the usual allowance of scrambled feminine brains. In addition, she had a warm and affectionate Disposition, and didn't in the least mind rolling up her sleeves and helping Mother, or doing stunts on the sewing machine.

In a word, she was, in reality, a Nice, Intelligent, Good-Natured and Efficient Girl, who was admirably fitted to make a Model Wife.

But no one could have Suspicioned Such a Thing of her.

For she had Doped it out that the Way to make herself Attractive to Men was to Act in an Affected manner.

Naturally she was of a Staid and Serious Disposition, with no more Sense of Humor than a canned clam, but as she Figured it Out that it was up to her to be Bright and Vivacious she kept her Tongue going like a Flutter Mill, and Giggled so incessantly at everything that she got the Reputation of having Hysterics.

She also had Large and Beautiful Eyes, and Pretty Teeth that would have been Admired if she had Let Them Alone, but she was so Afraid they would not be Noticed that she Rolled her Orbs and Smiled as she Talked until she appeared to be having Some kind of Fit.

Talked Foolishness

Nor were her Looks alone Against her. She talked Foolish, and Conversed with an English Accent that was apt to miss Connections when she got Real Interested and leave her stranded on the Sharp A on which she was Born.

But it was the Subject Matter of her tete-a-tetes that Did her up Brown, for though she cut the Pictures of Edna May in the Back of the Magazine and Pinned them up on the Walls of her Room, and Slept with "Pam" under her Pillow and Played "Dearie" on the Pianola when she was by Herself.

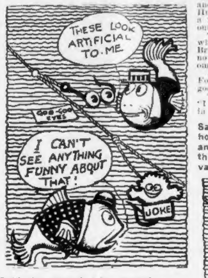
She Affected to be Literary and Artistic, and Musical, and Packed Around Copies of Ibsen, and Forced Helpless Youths to accompany her to Picture Galleries and Symphony Concerts.

Nor did her Folly Stop Here. She thought it Seemed Elegant and Refined to Pretend to be Ignorant of all Domestic Affairs, and when the Conversation turned upon Housekeeping and the Servant Problem she would Fetch a Shudder and Say that She did not See how any Woman could Bear to Spend her Life attending to such Sordid Details as Seeing about the Cooking and Wrestling with the Butcher and Grocery Bills.

Furthermore, she would Affect to be Perfectly Helpless and say that she Always got Cheated in the Stores when she went Shopping because she was Such a Child about Money, although, in Truth, she could scent a Bargain across the Town and could Spread a Dollar over as much Show as the next One.

Now, many Young Men happened along the Foolish Virgin's way, and as she was a Good Looker, all right, they all nibbled a Little at her Hook.

Said the first, who nibbled at the hook baited with the eyes called "goo-goo." "The idea of living with case of St. Vitus' dance doesn't appeal to me."



THESE LOOK ARTIFICIAL TO ME
GOO-GOO EYES
I CAN'T SEE ANYTHING FUNNY ABOUT THAT!
JOKE

Said the second, who paused at the joke bait. "She gets on my nerves with her silly giggle." and he passed on.

"She Gets on My Nerves"

"She is Extremely Attractive in Person," said One, "but she gets on my Nerves with her Silly Giggle. Besides I Fear a Woman who Laughs at Everything has no Heart, and when I marry it is going to be Little Tenderness for Mine and not a Professional Jester, for I apprehend that Wit has no Place in the Domestic Circle."

So he passed on Without Speaking, and the Foolish Virgin, who did not even see the Point of a Joke when it was Diagrammed for her, never knew that she had Lost Out on her Hollow Mirth.

"She is without doubt a Charming Creature," said the next Good Chance, "but there must be Something the Matter with her that makes her do her Eyes and Mouth so Queer. Anyhow, the Idea of Living with a Case of St. Vitus's Dance doesn't Make a Hit with Me, so it's Me for the Tall Timber, for what I admire most in Woman is a Sweet, Placid, Restful Expression."

Therefore the Good Chance stopped calling of an evening, and the Foolish Virgin, who had Grimaced for his Benefit until she had to Rub her Face with Witch Hazel to Rest it, Wondered Why.

"I expect she is All the Goods, and that she would Make a Helpful and Elevating Wife," said the next Youth, who happened to have a Large Roll and was therefore Hotly Sought After, "but she is a Trifle Too Cultivated for one who does not Care so much to Improve his Mind as to Enjoy the Passing Hour, and inasmuch as I have No Desire to Trot Around to Grand Operas when I might be Looking at a Real Swell Dancer, I pass her up. Yet if she was only Down on my Plane and took a Heart interest in the Higher Speed of the Automobile instead of the Higher Life, how happy we might be."

So the Foolish Virgin lost out again, although her Veneer of Culture was so Thin it was always Peeling off in Spots.

"Wouldn't Marry Her"

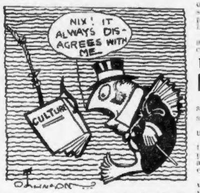
"I will not deny," said the next Eligible Man who strayed that way, "that she attracted me Very Much at First Sight, but nothing on Earth would induce me to Marry a Woman who cares nothing for Domesticity, and who would Yank me around Boarding Houses and Family Hotels the Balance of My Life. I have had enough of that kind of Existence now, and I do not Propose to be one of the Husbands that come Home of Nights to a table d'hote dinner, and then take Fido out for a Walk on the end of a string.

"My Feminine Ideal is a Gentle Being whose Happiness consists in making a Bright and Cheerful home for Hubby, and no Lady who cannot bring Domestic Recommendations need apply for the job."

And again it was twenty-three for the Foolish Virgin, who was, in reality, a good Free Hand Cook.

"If I was not wise," said the next man, "I should get caught and landed there, for in many Ways she is a Winner, but I've seen what these Wives who do not understand the Value of Money, and are Perfectly Helpless, do to their Husbands' Pocketbooks, and I'm the Foxy Gentleman that is going to Side Step that Fate. I Want a Wife who will Help Me Get There, not Hold Me Back, and while I love to read about the clinging vine in Poetry Books, I do not want any Dead Weight festooned on me in Real Life. Hence it is nay, nay Pauline for me for the Lady with Leaks in her Handbag, and a Constitutional Inability to count change."

Said the third, who found the hook baited with affectation and false culture: "I'll pass this up. It's too highly cultivated for me."



NIX! IT ALWAYS DISAGREES WITH ME
CULTURE

As man after man passed by the Foolish Virgin wondered greatly what was the matter with her Bait, and she never once got next to the Fact that it was because it was artificial, and that had she only been her Natural Self she could have caught any one of them.

The moral of which is, girls, be your own selves.

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

A Thrilling Story of American Life by Brand Whitlock

CHAPTER XVI.—Continued

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

ARCHIE had scarcely noticed Keenan and Mandell; once he had wrested his eyes from Gibbs, he had not taken them from Jackson. He had been puzzled at first, but now, in a flash, he recognized in Jackson the man who had shot Moon.

"You see, Joe," Mandell suddenly spoke up—his voice was a rumbling bass in harmony with his heavy jaws—"it was a clear case of self-defence. The shamming-pusher starts out to clean up down the line, he unsloughs up there by Connie's place on Caldwell, and musses a wingy, and then he goes across the street and bashes a dinge; he goes along that way, bucklin' into everybody he meets, until he meets Curly, who was standing down there by Sailor Goin's drum chinnin' Steve Noonan—he goes up to them and begins. Curly mopes off; he dogs him down to Cliff Decker's corner, catches up and gives Curly a clout in the gash——"

Mason was listening intently, leaning forward, his keen eyes fixed on Mandell's. He was glad at last to have the story from one he could trust to give the details correctly; heretofore, he had had nothing but the accounts in the newspapers, and he had no more confidence in the newspapers than he had in the courts or the churches, or any other institution of the world above him.

Archie listened, too, finding a new fascination in the tale, though he had had it already from one of the gang, Pat Whalen, who had been fortunate enough to see the tragedy, and had had the distinction of testifying in the case. Whalen had seen Moon, a bartender with pugilistic ambitions, make an unprovoked assault on Jackson, follow him to the corner and knock him down; he had seen Jackson stagger to his feet, draw his revolver and back away.

He had told Archie how deathly white Jackson's face had gone as he backed, backed, a whole block, a crowd following, and Moon coming after, cursing and swearing, taunting Jackson, daring him to shoot, telling him he was "four-flushing with that smoke-wagon," warning him to make a good job when he did shoot, for he intended to make him eat his gun.

He had told how marvellously cool Jackson was; he had said in a low voice: "I don't want to shoot you—I just want you to let me alone."

And when Whalen had described how Moon had flung off his coat, how bystanders had tried to restrain him, how he had rushed on, how Jackson had gone into the vacant lot by old Jim Pepper's shanty, coming out on the other side, until he was met by Eva Clason, who tried to open a gate and let Jackson into the brothel she called home.

"Nerve!"

Whalen had given Archie a sense of the ironical fate that that day had led Eva's piano player to nail up the gate so that the chickens she had bought could not get out of the yard. The gate would not open and Moon was on him again and Jackson backed and backed, clear around to the sidewalk on Caldwell street, and then, when he had completed the circuit, Moon had sprung at him.

Then the revolver had cracked, the crowd closed in, and there lay Moon on the sidewalk, dead—and Jackson looking down at him. Then the cries for air, the patrol wagon, and the police.

As Mandell told the story now Archie kept his eyes on Jackson. At the point where he had said, "I don't want to shoot you," Jackson's eyes grew moist with tears; he blinked and knocked the ashes from his cigarette with the nail of his little finger, sprinkling them on the floor. When Mandell had done, Mason looked up at Jackson.

"Well, Curly," he said, "you had the right nerve!"

"Nerve!" said Mandell, "I guess so!"

"Nerve!" repeated Keenan. "He had enough for a whole mob!"

"Ach!" said Jackson, twisting away from them on his chair.

"I'd 'a' let him have it when he first bashed me," said Keenan.

"Yes!" cried Jackson suddenly, rising and catching his chair by the back. "Yes—and been settled for it! I didn't want to do it; I didn't want to get into trouble. You always was that way, Jimmy."

Archie's Discovery

Archie looked at Curly Jackson as he stood with an arm outstretched toward Keenan; his figure was tall and straight and slender, and as he noted the short brown curls that gave him his name, the tanned cheeks, the attitude in which he held himself, something confused Archie, some thought he could not catch—some idea that evaded him, coming near till he was just on the point of grasping it, then eluding him, like a name one tries desperately to recall.

"I didn't have my finger on the trigger," Jackson went on, speaking in his high, shrill excited voice. "I held it on the trigger-guard all the time."

And then suddenly it came to Archie—that bronzed skin, that set of the shoulders, that trimness, that alertness, that coolness. Jackson could have got nowhere but in the army. He had been a soldier—what was more, he had been a regular. And Archie felt something like devotion for him.

"Sit down, Curly," said Gibbs, and Jackson sank into his chair. A minute later Jackson turned to Mason and said quietly: "You see, Joe, I don't like to talk about it—nor to think of it. I didn't want to kill him, God knows. I don't see anything in it to get swelled about and be the wise guy."

CHAPTER XVII.

CURLY JACKSON sat for a moment idly making little circles on the polished surface of the table with the moist bottom of his glass; then abruptly he rose and left the room. The others followed him with their eyes. Archie was deeply interested.

He longed to talk to Jackson, longed to show him how he admired him, but he was timid in this company, and felt that it became him best to remain quiet.

But Jackson's conduct in the tragedy had fired Archie's imagination, and Jackson was as much the hero in his eyes as he was in the eyes of his companions. And then Archie thought of his own skill with the carbine and the revolver, and he wished he could display it to these men; perhaps in that way he could attract their notice and gain their approval.

"He doesn't want to talk about it," said Mason when Jackson had disappeared.

"No," said Gibbs. "Let him alone."

Jackson was gone but a few minutes, and then he returned and quietly took his seat at the table. They talked of other things then, but Archie could understand little they said, for they spoke in a language that was almost wholly unintelligible to him. But he sat and listened with a bewildering sense of mystery that made their conversation all the more fascinating. What they said conveyed to him a sense of a wild, rough, dangerous life that was full of adventure and a kind of low romance, and Archie felt that he would like to know these men better; if possible, to be one of them; and at the thought his heart beat faster, as at the sudden possibility of a new achievement.

As they talked voices were heard in the barroom outside, and presently a huge man stood in the doorway. He was fully six feet in height, and blonde. His face was red, and he was dressed in dark gray clothes, a blue polka-dotted cravat giving his attire its one touch of color. He reminded Archie of some one, and he tried to think who that person was.

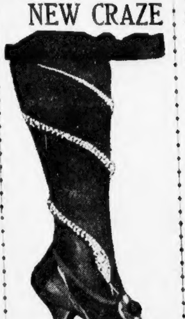
SNAKES ON STOCKINGS IS NEW CRAZE



EVE had stockings of all kinds, but here is one the average woman would hardly care to wear, because she doesn't like snakes, either dead or alive or in imitation. They are wearing them in Paris and New York, however, and Bostonians have been known quite often to adopt Parisian freaks.

What Is Money to This Girl?

BY WINIFRED BLACK

POOR little Lolita Armour, she's turning out to be just a plain human little girl after all, and the fairy princess business is all vanishing in the clear light of everyday life just as the fairy gold in the legend disappeared the minute the sun shone on it.

Her father is building her a fairy palace on the banks of a clear, rushing river. He is having the ground laid out like the pleasure garden of a great queen.

There are walks and drives and lakes and streams and flowers, and in the midst of all there stands the palace—built of marble by the greatest architects the world can furnish.

Every corner of the globe has been scoured for treasures of beauty with which to build the great spacious rooms of the palace.

Every day the miracle of loveliness grows, and for the past week, the papers tell us, little Lolita Armour, for whom all this splendor and this beauty have sprung into being, has spent every day in the grounds of her fairy palace.

"It's No Use"

AND on the last day, as she stepped into the automobile that was to whirl her to her city home, one who loved her dearly, seeing the light of lambent happiness dancing in the child's soft eye, leaned to her and said:

"This is a beautiful enchanted playground for you, isn't it, Lolita?"

"Yes," said the child, with a gasp and a shiver of pure delight. "I've found three different sand piles in the garden already; maybe to-morrow there will be another sand pile for me to find."

I wonder what the one who loves her very dearly thinks about those sand piles?

It's no use, Mr. Millionaire; it's not the slightest particle of use; you can't buy one single thing for your child that is one single bit different from the simple little pleasures of the child of the poorest man in your employ.

What a cheat money is after all; what a miserable, deluding, irritating, empty cheat.

What's Gold?

FAIRY gold—why, it's all fairy gold, when you come to that.

It fades into nothing the minute the sweet sunshine of natural human nature shines even for one little instant on it.

Pile up your dollars, Mr. Millionaire; sit up at night and listen to them jingle.

Compose a symphony of the rustling of the green banknotes, harken to that symphony well, for, let me tell you, it is just about the only real music your poor dull ears will ever be able to hear.

Lock up your strong-boxes, seal up the vaults, make your wills and chuckle to yourself over the bitter smile the mourners you have slighted will wear at your funeral—I'll have none of your treasures, for it can buy nothing, not one, one little thing that will make a little child happy, a good woman joyous or an honest man rejoice.

Come, little Lolita, the money that will make your life a sad grind some day has not had time to spoil you yet. Come, let's go somewhere and find a sand pile—we won't have to pay a penny for it, either.

Household and Health Hints

FOR PANTRY SHELVES

WHEN cleaning pantry shelves fold together at least three sheets of newspaper the longest way of the full sheet. Place fold to the front of the shelf; fit carefully and when next clean papers are needed slip silver knife in fold of outer sheet, cut along entire length and remove soiled part.

Few practices are more beneficial to the condition of the eyes than is that of bathing them regularly every night before going to bed. Dust readily accumulates on the lids between the lashes and causes them to smart, an excellent method of cleaning them being the old-fashioned one of dabbing the lids with a piece of cotton wool dipped in cold weak tea.

Two Pockets That Are Easy to Make

The two newest pockets for change and car tickets are easy to make and pretty in appearance. The cuff pocket is for a tailored suit. It is made by cutting a piece of leather once and a half as deep as the cuff to which it is to be attached.

Shape one end of the leather for the pocket flap, and around the flap run two rows of machine stitching. The leather is slipped inside the cuff and its edges whipped to the cuff lining. Either use a snap button, or cut a vertical slit in the flap and button it over a cloth button sewed to the cuff.

In the belt pocket for the child take a piece of the material used for the frock and cut it eight by four inches. One end is shaped to a blunted point. For straps cut two pieces of material, each three inches by one and one-quarter inches, fold lengthwise through the middle, and, turning in the edges, stitch it.

A second row of stitching should be run parallel to the first and quite close to the opposite edge.

Now fold the large piece of cloth envelope style until the flap's point is within half an inch of the second fold. Then open and sew the straps across the back portion, each being two and one-half inches in length when done. Place them one and one-half inches apart. The pocket may be lined or not. A button and woven loop make a good fastener.

Newest Skirt Gives the Hipless Figure

THE very smartest and newest of skirts is what might be termed the Empire Princess mode, as it so well combines the best lines of these two prevailing styles. It is cut with a seam down the centre of the front. About ten inches below the waist line the seam is puckered on to a little straight piece of ribbon, so that the skirt when properly fitted gives the new draped effect. This looks very difficult, but the method is quite simple. This is the way it is managed:

First, a girdle of two ordinary widths of belting is sewn together, making a belt about five inches wide. This is boned and fitted to the figure tightly. The skirt, cut five inches longer than for an ordinary model, is then attached to the top of this girdle and allowed to hang straight down from there in a semi-fitting tightness at the waist.

This style of skirt will look well with either a waist of the same material or of a contrasting one.

The waist worn with this skirt is called a "vest," there is no seam except under the arm, and, unlike the other high-collar effects, in this particular model it finishes at the line of the neck.

It is made of heavy filet net embroidered in shades of natty blue.

Den Thompson Again in Old Homestead Just to Prove That He Isn't Dead

Famous Character Appears Again in New York Tonight in Real Play of the Home.

Denman Thompson is going to drink from the old tin dipper again. That is, he's going back to "The Old Homestead" for a short stay and what with the chickens, the pump, the load of hay, the Farm Hands Quartette, the roller towel and "the girls" coming to act their old parts, it'll be jest like hum, b'gosh!

"I'm going to do it just to please the children," said the white-haired, ruddy-faced old man who has played Joshua Whitcomb more times than he can remember and who has just gone to New York from his farm at West Swanzey, N. H., to play it a few more times. "You see," he explained, easing his sciatica in an armchair, "they want me to prove I'm not dead yet. Some folks seem to think I am, and the children got so tired answering questions that they asked me to act again just to show people that I'm still on earth. So here I am, in my seventy-fourth year and the clutches of rheumatism, getting ready to start in again at the Academy of Music, where the play once ran for three seasons. I'm a little stiff now, but I guess I'll be limbered up by to-night."

Denman Thompson looks more like a retired farmer than an actor who has come out of retirement to please "the children."

No Patti Nonsense.

"There's one thing," he remarked, "that I'd like to have understood—this isn't going to be my farewell. I'm no Patti and I don't want to get mixed up in any of that 'farewell' business. I've come to town just to act Joshua a few times more, that's all."

"Do you know how many times you have acted the part?"

"I've no more idea," replied the veteran, "than I have of the number of seeds in a fig. All I know is that I played Joshua Whitcomb for over thirty years, first in the play of that name for fifteen years and then in 'The Old Homestead' for an even longer time. Some people may think that everybody has seen the old play, but if I were to march all the people up and down Broadway who never say the 'Homestead' you'd say 'Goodness sake, can it be possible!' I suppose some people wonder why the old play draws. One reason is that it attracts non-theatre-goers. It has a homely, wholesome appeal that draws 'em to the theatre. Now, young Reuben, for instance, doesn't amount to a hill of beans, but just see what interest there is in the general question, 'Where is my wandering boy to-night?' That gets 'em. Fathers bring their boys to see the play and mothers come along with the girls. I'm going to bring my daughters again. Mrs. Morse is coming on from Providence to play her original role of Aunt Matilda, Mrs. Kilpatrick will be down from the farm to play Mrs. Hopkins again, and Mrs. McFarland is coming with her to take up her old part of Anna Maria Murdock. Yes, it's going to be real homelike."

"Quite in keeping with the play," was suggested.

Like a Family Reunion.

"Yes, it might be called a family reunion," said Mr. Thompson. "My daughters only play when I play—they've never been on the stage with any one else. Maybe that's what helps to give the play a home atmosphere. It's wholesome—there's no scandal or divorce, or anything of that kind—and there's no preaching. If you remember, old Joshua doesn't lecture the tramp. He simply says:

"'Do you ever think?'

"'Think of what?' asks the tramp.

"'Your mother.'

"There's the keynote—mother. The play never gets away from home and mother. The boy simply goes to the city and gets to drinking, and then he's taken back home. That goes home to people."

"And you believe the play that 'goes home' is the play that lives longest?"

"There's no doubt about it in my mind," was the answer. "What is there about Warfield and 'The Music Master,' for instance, but his love for a child. It's a simple, homely story, with simple human acting, and I believe Warfield could go on playing it for ten years if he wanted to. Clever lad, Warfield. Don't make any mistake about that. By jingo! he's clever. Warfield is the new kind of actor, the human actor. And Chauncey has made quite a success, hasn't he? Olcott, you know. He spoke his first line with me, and was the first to sing 'The Palms' in my play. The old-time idea was to be as unlike human beings as possible. When the star was ready to come on, you could hear him coming. He'd either stamp around himself to attract attention, or he'd have somebody kick over a soap box in the wings. If he didn't have an effective entrance he'd manufacture one."

"And they go to 'The Old Homestead' to see what?" I inquired.

Hay and the Play.

"W-e-ell," hesitated the old gentleman, "I don't think they go to see a load of hay. I want to find out," he went on with a smile, "whether I or the team of oxen is the attraction, and so I haven't brought the oxen with me this time. The oxen will stay at home, and leave me to work out the question. But I guess it isn't the oxen, and I'm sure it isn't the load of hay. I guess it's the 'Homestead.' Most of the characters were taken from life, and that probably makes them seem live. You know I found Joshua, Cy Prime and Lem Holbrook right there in Swanzey. In writing the piece I tried to make 'em talk just as I'd heard 'em talk. Charlie Hoyt did the same thing with a great deal of success. I had a long talk with Hoyt just before he died. 'Governor,' he said, 'I've found that the most effective lines are those that I imagined would be spoken under the circumstances.' I tried to build 'The Old Homestead' on that plan, and I guess it will stand for a few more years. As for myself, I'm like an old racehorse that is patched up with the idea that he may have another race in him, and—well, maybe there is another race in me."

"As for myself, I'm like an old race horse that is patched up with the idea that he may have another race in him; and—well, maybe there is another race in me," — Denman Thompson, in speaking of his reappearance as "Josh Whitcomb" in "The Old Homestead."

LABOR LEADERS A UNIT IN DEMANDING JURY TRIAL

ARE OPPOSED TO SECRETARY TAFT AS CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT.

Without exception every labor leader interviewed by the BOSTON AMERICAN, regardless of political belief, is unalterably opposed to Judge Taft as a presidential candidate.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor will receive the heartiest support of organized labor in this section in his campaign against Secretary Taft, who he terms "the injunction standard bearer."

In view of the fact that the right to a trial by jury in all cases for the violation of injunctions brought against labor men will be the leading issue in the coming campaigns, it is predicted that Judge Taft, if nominated, will be overwhelmingly defeated if labor men do their duty at the polls.

Following are interviews with additional labor leaders:

By S. M. Lent, business agent of Pattern Makers' Association:

"Organized labor cannot be cajoled into voting for its worst enemy, the first judge to grant an injunction against a labor union in this country."

By Harry Noble, business agent of Painters' Union No. 11:

"I am opposed to any man, no matter what his party, who is in favor of granting injunctions against labor unions. All applications by employers for injunctions should be heard before a jury."

By James H. Rehill, business agent of Marble Workers' Union:

"I have voted the Republican ticket in past presidential campaigns, but if Judge Taft is the party nominee in 1908 he will not receive my vote. It is about time for the laboring men to get together at the polls and demand a trial by jury in injunction cases.

"It remained for Secretary Taft to be the first judge to grant an injunction in labor disputes in this country. By and by they will tell us that he is protecting the interests of the people."

By Thomas P. Curtin, secretary of Typographical Union No. 13:

"Without exception Secretary Taft is the greatest enemy of organized labor in public life to-day, and merits the stern rebuke of all union men at the polls if nominated for President."

By Edward F. X. McCarthy, recording secretary Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17:

"A man who is in favor of injunctions should be the last to expect the support of organized labor. I believe that Taft is, as President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor says, 'the standard bearer of injunctions in this country.'"

TIME FOR PEOPLE TO STOP RULE BY THE CORPORATIONS

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 30.—John McDonough, who, with Reuben Roble Lyon, was last night nominated for Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals by the Independence League Convention, in an interview with the AMERICAN, said: "I consider the election of judges as important if not more important than the election of Governors, because the courts have exercised the power of setting aside popular laws passed by a Legislature and approved by the Governor.

"Government by injunction did not attract much attention or opposition when applied to labor organizations only, but now, when injunctions are issued prohibiting the enforcement of State laws, when the hands of the State's executive officer are tied by court orders, and when just decisions of our highest courts are reversed in the interest of and at the behest of trusts and monopolies, the people are awakening to the great danger to their rights and liberities.

"It is our duty always to bear in mind the words of the Constitution of the United States, that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, and that every person is entitled to equal protection of the law.

"These words should be construed to mean equal and exact justice to all, regardles of race, creed or color, justice for the strong and weak, the rich and poor alike.

"This government was established by the masses of the people and has been maintained and protected by them. It is now threatened with great danger, danger from usurpation of powers, danger from designing men, danger from bribery and corruption of officials.

"In view of all this it is high time to cry halt.

"It is time for independent citizens, regardles of previous political affiliations, to follow such earnest, patriotic and practical men as William Randolph Hearst in a movement having among its objects the selection and election of officials by the people and not by unlawful combinations."

"VICTORY FOR LABOR IS CERTAIN IF MEN BUT HOLD TOGETHER"

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 30.—William H. Grady, president of the Central Labor Union, said:

"Injunctions are the bane of the laboring man. They are often applied by judges indiscriminately and without cause. Why some years ago I had one brought against me and was dragged into court charged with contempt.

"It was a case I had little to do with and the injunction was dismissed, but not until after it had caused a great deal of trouble. I heartily favor trial by jury in injunction cases, and it will certainly come if the laboring men stand together.

"Mr. Taft's attitude regarding injunctions will certainly prevent him from getting any support from organized labor."

AMERICA IS IMMORAL, SAYS GORKY IN NOVEL

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—Bitter charges of immorality and hypocrisy are made against America by Maxim Gorky, the Russian novelist, in the sensational new novel "Mother," printed in German and Russian which has made its appearance simultaneously at Leipsic and Moscow.

Gorky defends his action in taking to America a woman who was not his wife. He insists America is the most immoral country in the world, says divorces are most abundant there, and that society is corrupt to the core. It was wrong in view of these conditions to condemn his liason, he contends.

In both Leipsic and Moscow the book has been confiscated, the censors declaring it a menace to public morals. Its circulation will not be permitted unless many passages are omitted.

AUTO DEALER'S PLEA GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

George Meserve Weatherbee, a Boston automobile dealer, pleaded guilty before Judge Bond in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court at East Cambridge to-day to a charge of manslaughter in running down in his automobile and killing Warren M. Batchelder. The law provides for a heavy jail sentence.

Weatherbee's bail was raised this morning from $5,000 to $10,000, and he was released when his uncle, Isaac H. Meserve, a retired Boston merchant, furnished this amount. Weatherbee will appear for sentence in December.

TWO GAMES FOR HARVARD TEAM

Harvard will open her football season on Wednesday, when she will have the Bowdoin team as an opponent, and on Saturday the Crimson eleven will tackle Maine, both games at Cambridge. On these days the admirers of the Harvard team will have their first opportunity to size up the material. The Harvard candidates have been practicing since September 18, but as yet haven't had any real scrimmage, so it is up to Coach Crane to give the men some real hard work to-day and to-morrow.

Eighteen men will start on the training table to-day, and doubtless more will be taken on later. They are Captain Parker, Burr, Apollonio, Peirce, Brock, Gilbert, Hoar, Inches, Mason, Kennard, Macdonald, Lockwood, Starr, Newhall, Robinson, Trainer "Pooch" Donovan, Manager Dutcher and Assistant Manager Eggleston.

COLUMBUS 6, TORONTO 5.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 30.—Columbus defeated the Torontos, champions of the Eastern League, in the third of the post-season games by a score of 6 to 5. The series now stands, Toronto two victories and Columbus one. The game was played in a drizzling rain and darkness ended it after the visitors had taken their turn at the bat in the eighth inning. The teams continue the series here to-day.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON MAY SUSPEND LAJOIE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—A scandal in the American League may result from an unfortunate occurrence, but as yet the honor of this great organization is still untarnished. The complaint filed by the Detroit club against Cleveland, charging the Naps with stalling in the final game of the season between these two clubs at Detroit, stirred up a hornet's nest, the magnitude of which was never dreamed of by Secretary Nevin when he penned his complaint to President Johnson.

After receiving Navin's statement Johnson wired Umpires Hurst and Connolly for their version of the affair, and after hearing from the arbitrators Ban assessed a fine of $300 against the Cleveland club. And this same fine almost has, and may yet act as a boomerang against Detroit in their fight for the pennant.

Cleveland Didn't Like Fine.

The Cleveland owners did not take kindly to parting with $300 without a word of protest, inasmuch as the money would go to Detroit. Navin claiming that they had been damaged, and as Cleveland had not been given the opportunity of saying a word in defence of their players, the owners announced that they would appeal Johnson's ruling to the board of directors.

Saturday, while in Washington, Secretary Barnard received word from President Johnson that the $300 fine would have to be paid within 24 hours, or he would suspend Manager Lajoie.

A suspension of Larry at the present time would not look very good, inasmuch as Cleveland has three games scheduled with both the Athletics and Chicago, and with Turner out of the game with a lame back and Lajoie suspended, Cleveland would have only about one-half of their strength right now, and both the Athletics and Chicago probably would win three straight without much trouble. And three victories for either team over the Naps might mean the American League pennant.

Of course Navin and Jennings never dreamed that Lajoie might be suspended and the Naps greatly weakened just before the games with the Athletics or Sox or it is probable no complaint would have been made against Cleveland.

Ban Says Fine Must Be Paid.

Secretary Barnard conferred with President Johnson in New York Saturday night and the case was gone into thoroughly. Ban insisted that the fine be paid and the powers that be in Cleveland were so notified.

Whether or not the fine will be paid rests with Kilfoyle and Somers. If they fail to toe the mark with the $300, Johnson may yet suspend Lajoie, and if he does, woe be unto Detroit's chances for the pennant.

Of course the Athletics and Sox would rejoice in Lajoie's suspension, as it would help their chances for the pennant. But the Detroit club owners, manager and players, and the public at large would be a sore bunch should the Tigers lose out as a result of such action by President Johnson. Some unpleasant things might be said and others hinted at, and all in all, it would not be a very nice state of affairs.

HUB HORSES WILL RACE AT LIMA THIS WEEK

By Edward E. Cogswell.

It is away out of the ordinary for the campaigners in the Grand Circuit to tackle a half-mile track meting, however it may be that frequently races are won in the big circuit by recruits from the bull rings breaking into the highest of equine society, but this week the flyers, which have been steadily at it since Detroit, have taken to the Lima, O., two-lap course for their racing.

Naturally there is a good reason for this, and it comes in there being a vacant week between the close of the Columbus meeting and the opening of the one at Lexington, Ky. Lima people was quick to see wherein this lapse would be of benefit to them and immediately opened last Spring five early-closing stake races, which, with good-sized purses, turned the trick in getting the horses from the big stables.

Of these the most important is the 2:24 Lima M. and M. for trotters, valued at $2,500, and included among the starters are noticed Sonoma Girl, 2:05¼; Claty Latus, 2:08½, and Codero, 2:10¼, from Boston and vicinity, and Sterling McKinney, 2:09¼; Onwis, 2:14¾; Kenneth Mac, 2:12¼, etc.

In the 2:15 pacing stake for $2,000 are thirty-two nominations, and so along through the list of events the entry has been very large and of quality. Secretary F. E. Baxter writes that he fully expects the meeting will prove the banner one ever held over a half-mile track in the history of horse racing.

But the news has drifted over from Columbus that Ed Geers has taken to wearing a derby hat. When he made his initial appearance with it in the hotel lobby there came nearly being a riot, as it was the first time that the "great man of the sulky" was ever seen with any except a soft hat, the broad Southern kind. When finally cornered for his makeup, into what would be taken for a country parson Geers said he promised to wear whatever a friend bought him in the top piece line.

"Doggone, he slipped this stiff hat on my head and I couldn't go back on my word, was his final excuse.

But in the real-up-to-date dresser all the boys have to bow to Dick McMahon as the swell of the circuit now that Jack Curry has gone for pastures new. "Long Shot" Cox got after him with a rush of choice expletives on his evening harness, saying that Dick borrows the clothes, but on the other hand the latter declares the New Hampshire reinsman got his Summer suit dyed black so as to wear it through the Fall.

Here is a hot one on presiding Judge Hayt. He was being freely criticised by a group of horsemen when one of the number delivered himself of the following:

"I'm willing to chip in to buy a folding bed for Hayt. He takes many a nap in his chair during the racing, and it would seem a charitable thing to provide for his snoozes under the most comfortable conditions. Yes, let the boys get him a bed. I'll gladly unbelt when the paper comes around."

SPORTING NEWS SUMMARY.

FOOTBALL.

THE TUFTS football squad has received two strong additions by the appearance of Harold D. Wilson and Vincent Sheehy. Wilson played an end on the team of 1904, and with Eugene Sullivan, who was also an end on the 1904 team and who was also returned to college, made the best pair of ends Tufts ever had. This was the weakness of last year's team. Sheehy played a remarkable game as halfback last year and the year before, but was not expected to return to college this Fall.

ROXBURY LATIN will have a hard problem in Milton Academy on the Milton Academy grounds, Milton, to-morrow. The Highland District schoolboys are much lighter than those of previous years, but what they lack in weight they make up in speed.

ANDOVER and Exeter have two important battles on for Saturday afternoon, the former will play the Harvard second team, while the latter will meet Bowdoin.

ENGLISH HIGH will have an opportunity to test its playing strength against Groton on Wednesday afternoon. It expects to duplicate Latin Schols's performance.

ANOTHER BIG GAME this week is scheduled for Saturday afternoon between aWitham High and Somerville High, to be played at Waltham.

STARTING THIS WEEK, the private school football teams will issue calls for candidates, and on Wednesday afternoon Captain Thomas Allen of Stone School will have his boys out for practice. So far no field has been selected to practice on, but efforts are being made to secure the oSuth End baseball grounds.

NEWTON HIGH will meet a tough proposition tomorrow afternoon in Needham High. Needham has been engaged in hard practice work for the past two weeks and expects to give Newton High a hard rub.

HYDE PARK HIGH is to play Dorchester at the Dunbar avenue grounds to-morrow afternoon.

THE ANNUAL meeting of the Interscholastic Athletic League, of which Somerville High and Dorchester High athletic teams are members, was held at Young's. Officers were elected as follows: Charles Abbott, Rindge Manual Training School, president; Henry C. Drown, Dorchester High, first vice-president; Charles Jeaney, English High School, second vice-president; Herbert H. Stone, a Somerville High graduate, secretary-treasurer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

This week at the Chestnut Hill G. C. the first round of the competition for the club championship will be played, contestants making the sixteen lowest gross scores in Saturday's tournament qualifying for scratch match play for the title. The second sixteen gross scores in Saturday's tournament qualifying for scratch match play for the title. The second sixteen gross scores qualified for handicap match play for a consolation cup.

Harvard's Fall rowing will commence this afternoon at 5:30. Captain Richardson has called out candidates for the 'varsity crew for that time and trial eights will be formed which will row on the river as long as the weather permits. This Fall there will be no freshman rowing, contrary to the practice in former years.

BOWLING

BOWLING LEAGUES are fast getting into line and schedules are being prepared calling for busy seasons. The Thompson's Spa League of six teams will start the ball rolling next Friday night.

THAT GOOD old standby for big pin rollers, the Commercial League, will open up next Monday night with at least ten teams in the field. Other leagues reorganized are: Jewelers, six teams, opening matches on October 9; Bank & Trust, twelve teams, October 8; Insurance, ten teams, October 10; Bankers & Brokers, ten teams, October 18, and Customhouse, six teams, October 11.

THE SUDBURY Industrial League begins its bowling season Tuesday, October 1, to run twenty-two weeks. The captains have voted to count the team total as one win in favor of the team in addition to games won. Several new teams are entered this season, making twelve clubs in all.

UMPIRE EVANS MAY QUIT.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 30.—Umpire Billy Evans, who was hit on the head with a pop bottle in St. Louis two weeks ago, has recovered and is at his home here. Evans is undecided whether to remain in baseball or not, and speaks of giving up his job as an umpire.

ATHLETICS AND TIGERS IN 2 GAMES

BATTING ORDER.

O'Leary, s.s.	Schreck, c.
Killian, p.	Waddell, p.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—A double-header will be played here this afternoon between the Tigers and the Athletics, and the biggest crowd that has attended an exhibition in this city this season is expected to attend.

"Wild Bill" Donovan, who beat the locals in the opening game, and "Ed" Killian, the clever southpaw, will probably do the pitching for the Detroits, while Eddie Plank, who pitched the first game, and Rube Waddell will most likely go to the firing line for the home talent.

On to-day's contests may hinge the championship of the American League. If the Detroits should win both games they can feel reasonably sure of the pennant, as they have only two more series to play after to-day, four games with Washington and three with St. Louis, making two tail-end teams to close the season with.

On the other hand, it seems that an even break will be the best that the locals can do with such a formidable opponent as the Jennings team, and this would leave them still one game to the bad. After the Tigers the Athletics will have to play both the Cleveland and the Senators, and their chances of winning straight games from them look weaker than the Tigers beating the Senators and Browns.

The Tigers are very confident of beating the home talent to-day, and will make every effort to capture both ends of the double-header.

DONOVAN HAS WON 25 BATTLES AND ONLY LOST 4

"Wild Bill" Donovan of Detroit still is the leading pitcher of the American League with the phenomenal record of 25 games won and four lost. The averages up to and including last Friday:

With a string of fourteen defeats behind them, the Pilgrims will go into to-day's contest with the White Sox determined to emerge a winner.

The showing of the Bostons recently has been the worst this season. Of course they have been trying out a lot of new talent, which is largely responsible for their wretched record, but even that is no reason why they should lose so many straight games.

Senators Won Four Straight.

The Bostons started their losing streak in their recent series with the Athletics. They lost the first game and then played to a thirteen-inning tie with the Quaker aggregation. After this series the Pilgrims took a hike to Washington, where the Senators, much to the surprise of the entire baseball world, annexed four straight victories.

Upon the finish of the series with the Washington team, the Bostons returned home and their first opponents were the clever players under th eleadership of Napoleon Lajoie. The Bostons lost two games to them, and the third was postponed on account of the weather.

After the Naps left town, the Tigers paid us a visit and won three straight games. The White Sox followed, and they have already won two games, the third one being on the schedule for to-day.

Last Chance to See Sox.

There will be undoubtedly a large crowd out to see the fun, as it will be the last chance of the season to see the White Sox, world's champions for 1906-1907, and possibly for 1907-1908.

Manager McGuire will probably send "Cy" Young, the reliable veteran, after today's game in the hope that he will shake the hoodoo. Manager Jones of the Chicagos will probably trot out "Doc" White, who easily beat the Bostons in the opening game here.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—Fred Tenney's Boston National team will open a series with the Cardinals, who have won every game in the two last series from them, to-day.

This series with the locals will be the last of the season for the Doves with the Western teams. After leaving the Mound City the Bostons will return home, where they will play their last series of the season with the Trolley Dodgers.

The Bostons are in good spirits as a result of their clever work against the Pirates, and they are very much encouraged, and hope to beat out their rivals, the Pilgrims, in the series at the conclusion of the two major league schedules.

Manager Tenney confirmed the report that was sent out from Pittsburg that he will be again manager and first baseman of the team next season, and he said that he believed next year the team would be fighting for a place in the first division all season.

Barberich, a newcomer, will pitch for the Bostons in all probability to-day, while Beebe will probably twirl for the home team.

The Bostons went to Wheeling, W. Va., to play the Central League team of that place yesterday, but had to call off the game on account of rain.

EW FATAL ACCIDENTS IN AUTO TRACK RACES

With Favorable Weather New Record Would Have Been Made Saturday.

By J. C. Kerrison.

In view of the accident resulting in the death of L. W. Smelser, the driver of the Lozier car in the twenty-four-hour race at Morris Park on Saturday, there will be a lot more talk about the dangers of track racing. Many people honestly believe it should be stopped, while others say that ntil motorists are provided with some special course it is better to have track racing han nothing at all.

While it is true that automobile track racing has a long list of fatalities, I have not the slightest doubt that statistics would show that steeplechasing, the football field, yachting and other sports claim many more victims each year than does the automobile track. As a rule, it is not the fault of the car or driver that these mishaps occur, but in nearly every instance these accidents are caused by the tires, for when a front tire gives way the car generally takes charge of itself, whether on the track or road, and it is largely a matter of luck rather than any skill on the part of the driver as to what happens afterward.

* * *

Take it all in all, while no records were smashed, Saturday's twenty-four-hour race was one of the best ever held, and but for the rain the winning Fiat car would have purobably covered over 1,100 miles and made a new record for contests of this character, as its motor was running as smoothly at the finish as it was at the start of the race.

Probably the most surprising feature of the race was the remarkably fine performance of the little 35-horsepower Studebaker car, driven by J. A. Ditman and E. Holm, which finished in second place, with a record of 878 miles. In view of the fact that this was the lowest powered car in the race, the Studebaker people have every reason to be proud of the record made by their car.

The total mileage made by each car in the race was as follows: Fiat, 984; Studebaker, 878; Itala, 873; Frayer-Miller, 75d; O. K. car, 745; Stearns, 729; Simplex, 696; Stearns, 594; Darracq, 534; Motobloc, 485; Rolls-Royce, 468; De Dietrich, 429; Welch, 325; Packard, 677.

Paul Lacroix, the owner of the Renault, which won the previous twenty-four-hour race at Morris Park, is anxious to meet the Thomas and Fiat cars in a special twenty-four-hour race, but whether another one will be held or not is an open question.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Gilmore and Master Charles Gilmore are spending a couple of weeks in this city recovering from the rush and turmoil of the great White City. They are spending two weeks at the Gilmore mansion in Brookline, and during their short stay here will renew old acquaintances. E. A. Gilmore is one of the best known of the motor tradesmen, and when he reached the home of the Bay State Automobile Association, of which, by the way, he was one of the founders, yesterday, he was given a grand ovation. "Gil" was one of Boston's popular motorists, and he seems to have lost none of his old-time popularity.

Edgar Apperson, the designer and builder of the well-known Apperson cars, arrived in town yesterday as the guest of Mr. Smith, of Moore & Smith, who are to handle the Apperson line the coming year. Mr. Apperson expressed himself as well pleased with the outlook for the coming season, saying that his firm will make more cars this year than they turned out last season. He looks for a lively, active year, with lots of business, and considers the cry of "hard times" as a wolf and nothing more. He can find no indications of hard times anywhere in the country.

INTER-CITY BOXING MEET FOR TO-MORROW

What looks like the best boxing meeting in the history of the Winnisimmet Athletic Club will be pulled off tomorrow night by that organization, when the big inter-city meet will be held. All the New York boxers, with the exception of Willie Schumacher, are here, and the Avonia crack left for this city last night. He would have come along with the rest of the New Yorkers if he had not missed connections.

The full bill to-morrow night is as follows: Eddie Smith of New York vs. Charley Walsh, brother of the famous Jimmy; Joe Wagner of New York vs. Patsy McKenna; Willie Schumacher of New York vs. Henry Myers, the boy who won the Boston Athletic Club's National Amateur tournament. All the above bouts will be limited to six rounds each.

The big bout of the evening will bring Jimmy Walsh, America's bantamweight champion, and "Babe" Cullen of New York together for ten rounds.

Cullen worked out Saturday at the Chelsea club's rooms, and showed by his boxing with "Emergency" Kelly that he was entitled to all the good things that have been said about him, and that the Newton boy will need all his great cleverness to do anything with him.

A feature of the evening will be the appearance of Joe Cummings of the B. A. A. as refree.

With Jimmy Walsh, Schumacher, Wagner, Myers and Cummings, acting at third man in the ring, it will look like the old times up at the Exeter street club again.

Principal Bouts Carded This Week

MONDAY.

Tommy Murphy vs. George Decker, New York.

TUESDAY.

Jimmy Walsh vs. Babe Cullen, Winnisimmett A. C., Chelsea.

THURSDAY.

Joe Gregg vs. Charley Sieger, Brazil, Ind.

FRIDAY.

Willie Fitzgerald vs. Fred Landers, Philadelphia.

DECKER WILL MEET PERELLI

Edward Decker, the Buffalo heavyweight wrestler, will make his first appearance in New England to-morrow night, when he faces John Perelli, the Italian, at the Columbia Theatre in a finish match under catch-as-catch-can rules. Decker is a 200 pounder, who has won his way to the front ranks of mat performers by defeating some of the stars of the country in the Middle West, and is considered the right kind of a man to defeat the aggressive Italian, who has not been defeated since he tackled Hackenschmidt nearly two years ago.

In addition to the main event there will be several bouts between amateurs, many of whom have entered the tournament now in progress at the theatre, and hose work to date has been extremely ratifying to the spectators.

Cold Piano Facts

We don't make any pianos. We don't advertise any special pianos. We have nothing special to say about any piano in particular. The Piano Trust is fighting us and we are fighting the Piano Trust tooth and nail. We ask no mercy—we expect none—and we give none. Trust pianos are fine, in fact some of the finest pianos in the world are in the Trust, and we sell these same pianos every week at Trust-fighting prices—Lower, away lower by many dollars than you can buy them any place in this wide world. We lose money, they say. Well, that's our business. What do you care? You buy while the fight is on; never mind our losses. We'll take care of ourselves. Come this week and see the fight.

The Armies of Industrial Plutocracy

They Have Them in Germany, Bigger Ones in America

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

More than a hundred years ago Charles Fourier, in France, predicted the era of government by "industrial feudalism." He foresaw that the old MILITARY feudalism would be replaced by a FEUDALISM of MONEY just as powerful in government, and perhaps more difficult to conquer than the original feudalism of the castle and the armed bandits.

In this, and in many other ways, Fourier was a marvellous prophet. All over the world to-day you see the beginning of the system of industrial feudalism, the system by which organized money is to rule in place of organized soldiers. UNTIL THE PEOPLE SHALL AT LAST OVERCOME THE ORGANIZED DOLLARS AS THEY OVERCAME THE ORGANIZED SOLDIERS.

The news from Germany illustrates Fourier's prediction interestingly.

Already begins the battle between the various feudal industrialists. There is the great gun shop of Krupp. This enormous concern, built up slowly, manufacturing cannon and other man-killing machines, under the patronage of the Emperor, EMPLOYS AND OWNS FORTY THOUSAND workmen.

The brains of the machine died not long ago, leaving it to three girls. The German Emperor has taken these three girls under his protection, he attends their weddings, works for them—it is part of his task as the head of an industrial monarchy.

It was supposed that the great Krupp concern was a monopoly national and PERMANENT. But not at all.

In olden times some feudal baron, perched on his hill, ruled undisturbed for a while, and then on some other hill another stone castle was slowly built up; other men were taken from the plough and taught to fight, and the feudal war was on.

The same thing happens in industry. In Germany they have now rivalling the Krupps two other great firms, those of Thyssen and Ehrhardt.

These demand from the business-emperor William their share of the national money, just as the rival fuedal barons demanded their share of tribute from the passing merchants.

Thyssen, the big Krupp rival, is very properly called "the uncrowned King of Westphalia." He has under him twenty-five thousand men—a very respectable industrial army—for which he demands and will get his share of the national money.

Over here in America we have developed feudal industry on a scale that makes Krupp and Thyssen look small. We have our Steel Trust, with its employes running up into the hundreds of thousands. We have our Oil Trust, stretching out in all directions, employing ITS hundreds of thousands.

The age of industrial feudalism which Fourier described has ARRIVED. The country is governed indeed by organized dollars, as it was ruled formerly by organized soldiers.

And the people have begun in a feeble, fitful way the protest and the struggle against the power of lawless organized money, just as they began far back in the dark ages the fitful, discouraging, LONG battle against lawless, organized MILITARY FORCE.

The reader of the future will study with interest the present development of this new power, the power of the organized dollar. It will be interesting to see by what processes this great force, this modern and necessary industrial combination, will change into a beneficent, useful, well-controlled agency of popular happiness.

The people eventually WILL control and master for their own good, and direct in their own way, the organized money; just as they succeeded in directing in their own way the organized soldiers.

The only armed soldiers in America to-day belong to the people themselves. The stronger they are the better for the people.

The day will come when the organized dollars also will be the people's servants, and then the better organized and the more powerful they are the better for the people.

Secretary Root Going to Mexico

Too Bad This Country Can't Send a Man Whom the Mexicans Could Respect.

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

Elihu Root, Secretary of State for the United States, formerly lawyer for the criminal Tweed, more recently and at present lawyer for every dishonest corporation that cares to hire him, is going to Mexico.

He will be received there by Diaz, the old, honorable President of the Mexican republic. He will mix with other decent men. MEN THAT WOULDN'T TAKE THE STOLEN MONEY OF A TWEED, OR THE STOLEN MONEY OF A TRUST THIEF, ANY MORE THAN THEY WOULD PICK A POCKET.

It is too bad to send to Mexico or to any other country "a representative" of America for whom Americans must apologize. This country is not represented at all; it is disgraced and misrepresented by the cunning fox who has piled up a fortune telling big criminals how they can dodge the law, by the man who began by taking part of the stolen money of a thief like Tweed, and who ends his career by taking a larger part of the stolen money of the Trust criminals.

It is to be hoped that Diaz and other honest men in Mexico, when they study the cunning face, the shifty eye, the CHARACTERLESS man sent to represent this country, will realize that his going is not the will of the people of the country; that he goes in spite of their will.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Says Woman Is Coming to Her Inheritance Under the Law, and That Nothing Can Hinder

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE majority of people regard law as quite apart from religion or poetry.

The mind inclined to be poetical or religious is not supposed to be the legal mind to-day.

Yet in olden times, among the Hindus, the Greeks and the Romans law was a part of religion, and, what is stranger still, laws were composed in VERSE.

The ancients said their laws came from the gods. But the "gods" were their ancestors.

Later they were transmitted to the sacred books.

Later still they were written by themselves; the Romans called them "verses," the Greeks "songs."

They were invariable in text, and if one word was changed a contract became void.

But with all their religion and poetical ideas of law, the ancients were unjust and narrow in their laws toward women.

The old laws said, "The son inherits, the daughter does not inherit." "The son continues the worship of ancestors, the daughter does not."

I must confess that last clause must have been gratifying to the daughters. To worship the ancestors who created such laws would require more angelic qualities than most women possess.

But as the historian says, "Law was not born of a sense of justice; it was a form of inherited religion."

Age Progressing

OF course, the primitive races of earth placed the ancestor on the altar of a Creator. Since he had created them he was the power they worshipped, and all he said or did was regarded as perfect. It was the nearest they could arrive at an idea of a Divine Creator.

From those far-away primitive men the old ideas of the inferiority of woman filtered down through thousands of years, and many of the unjust laws existing to-day are a result of the olden worship of ancestors.

It is gratifying to know we live in a more progressive age. However much family pride we may possess, and however we reverence our forefathers, we know they made some egregiou mistakes, and that in religion and law they were ofttimes cruel, bigoted an unjust.

Because they wrote certain la upon their statute books we do n feel bound to recite them like prayers and pass them on to future genera tions. Many ridiculous laws have bee changed in the last century.

Many more will be changed in the next.

Instead of saying "Our ancestors made this law, and it must be right," we are saying, "Is this law just? Does it stand for the best interests of the greater number?"

Unjust Law

NO law which restricts women from having a voice in affairs of State is a just law.

Although the greatest woman is not as great as the greatest man, it is evident to all who can observe and think that the brightest women are superior to the dullest men; and the dullest men are permitted to take an active part in the formation of laws.

Many unjust and foolish laws which hindered woman from having a righ to use her own earnings, or enjoy he own inheritance, have been modifie and regulated through the activity o brilliant and persistent women wh roused the just men to action.

One day in Rome, when the people wished a law adopted by the assembly of the tribes, a Patrician said to them: "What right have you to make a new law or touch an existing one; you who perform no religious acts in your assemblies, what have you in common with sacred laws?"

And at the same time these laws were ofttimes cruel and brutal. Just so men have said to women: "What right have you, mere women, to interfere with sacred laws?"

It is the feeble old superstition coming down across the ages; but it is so feeble that it is ready to expire. Woman is coming into her inheritance and nothing can hinder.

> Cato said, "I had rather men should ask why my statue is not set up than why it is."
